SIRE OF EIGHT WINNERS FROM NINE STARTERS

Hop Hop is the sire of nine foals to race, eight of which are winners, including Spring Hop ($36,069). The ninth is a two-year-old which was recently fourth at Monmouth. This year a Hop Hop colt out of the Needles mare Sharp Needle captured the grand championship of the Maryland Horse Breeders Yearling Show judged by Woody Stevens.

TOPS ON THE TRACK

Hop Hop's success at stud reflects his top-notch breeding and race career. Bred by E. P. Taylor and one of the highweighted two-year-olds of his year in Canada, Hop Hop is a stakes winner of 13 races including the prestigious Cup and Saucer Stakes in Canada. He won at distances from 6 furlongs to 1¼ miles on both dirt and turf.

SUPERIOR FAMILY

A son of five-season leading sire in Canada, Chop Chop, out of the stakes-winning *Tulyar mare *Tularia ("Dam of the Week," Daily Racing Form, Monday, September 22), Hop Hop is a half-brother to that hot two-year-old HONEST PLEASURE, which recently downed 18 rivals in the Arlington-Washington Futurity, then came back to win Belmont's Cowdin. Also a half-brother to stakes-placed winner Canalu. Second dam is *Suntop II, champion three-year-old filly in Ireland.

Colonial Cup On November 15

Forty owners of Thoroughbreds have answered Dale Thiel's opening call for horses to the $50,000 Colonial Cup and International Steeplechase, final leg of Steeplechasing's Triple Crown, to be staged on Mrs. Marion duPont Scott's expansive and lovely Springdale Course in Camden, S.C., on the afternoon of Saturday, November 15.

A perusal of the owners' list, plus the jumping horses they have in training, insures the new director of the Colonial Cup, a quality-quantity field of American entries for the sixth running of steeplechasing's richest race in the United States.

Thiel, 43, an ex-jockey and president of the South Carolina Thoroughbred Association, succeeded the late Raymond Woolfe as Cup Director in mid-August.

A native of suburban Buffalo, N. Y., Thiel is very active in the show ring, hunting and jumping what with owning 14 horses. He is also president of the Equistar Products Company of Camden, which manufactures Equimist, an automatic insecticide dispenser primarily developed for use in the horse and animal industry.

Thiel, son of a Bell Aircraft engineer, was No. 9 in a family of 10 children, and the only horseman in the whole family.

"When I was growing up we lived close by a riding academy," Dale recalls. "That's where I first started to ride. When I was old enough I went to New Jersey and got a job galloping horses at Garden State. For a few years I shuttled between Jersey in the summer and the Florida tracks in the winter. I tried riding flat horses in a couple of races, but I got too heavy and turned to jumping. One day at Saratoga, in a spill, a horse fell on me and shattered my right hip. It was three years before I could do anything about riding again."

After that, Thiel came to Camden to work with Woolfe, and stayed. Today, he and his wife Judy have a fine spread in Camden. They show horses, buy and sell, and otherwise have a wonderful country life. They have two children, Laurie, 11, and Charles, 4, and, of course, they ride horses, too.

Letters To The Editor

Consignors' Criticism

Sir:

As consignors to the Eastern Fall Sale at Timonium last month, I am writing to say that we, and many others to whom we talked, consider the advance publicity in the Daily Racing Form and THE MARYLAND HORSE (August, 1975) very poor indeed.

A select sale should be a select sale. If the committee felt that the Monday night horses "didn't quite measure up to the fairly rigid standards . . . etc., etc.," why accept them at all?

If you offer 300 horses for sale, they should be in one catalog, with one index, not separated by a big, blue page calling attention (for the umpteenth time) to the fact that the last 100 were substandard.

Buyers of horses are generally pretty shrewd. They know how to evaluate horses, both as to pedigree and conformation, and, as evidenced by what they paid, they certainly didn't go along with your judgment in all instances.

We have bred to Maryland stallions for a number of years. We own shares in two Maryland stallions. We subscribe to THE MARYLAND HORSE. As supporters of the industry in your state, we feel that you did very little to support us, the consignors. There wasn't much in your advertising to encourage the serious buyer to come out on Monday evening and help either of us.

Yours very truly,
Vera V. Meyers
Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Meyer
Birchrunville, Pa.

• For additional views on this subject, see page 21.

Fire Prevention

Sir:

Although I am essentially a hunting woman — and in my long ago youth MFH of the Smithtown Foxhounds (L.I.) as well as showing horses both under saddle and in harness — I unfortunately never felt that I had the means to own race horses. At least not the best — and those would have been the only kind I would have wanted. Therefore, although I read with pleasure THE MARYLAND HORSE I have never felt myself qualified to write a letter to the editor.

What has inspired me to do so now is the devastating fire at the Walnut Grove Farm on July 3rd. Although an American myself, like most foreigners who heard about it I was aghast . . . and like them wondered why people at home don't seem to realize that if their stables were built of brick or cement as they are here in Europe, such fires would not occur! In the thirty odd years I have lived abroad not once have I heard or read of such a disaster . . . and yet we have thunder storms just as terrific, and grooms just as careless with cigarettes!

Surely horsemen and women wealthy enough to own horses such as *Ribot, Sir Ivor, Secretariat — just to mention a very few — ought to be able to afford the difference in price between a flimsy wooden barn and a solid brick or cement one? And if not for the sake of their own pocketbooks, for humanitarian reasons and love of the horses themselves.

Sincerely,
Lida Fleitmann Bloodgood
Palazzo Taverna
Rome, Italy

$10,000 Reward Offered

Sir:

The following is a description of two Thoroughbred yearling colts that were taken from Keeneland's barn area sometime early Sunday, September 7, prior to our September Yearling Sale.

Hip #68 is a bay colt by Bagdad out of Investiture, consigned by Crescent Hill Farm which is owned by Robert Stilz of Midway, Kentucky. He has no markings. However, he does have an indentation under the chin where he had been kicked.

Hip #99 is a chestnut colt by Personality out of Noble Gesture, consigned by Charles M. Boone. He has an irregular star, stripe starting in center of face narrowing and becoming flesh colored and ending between nostrils. Two diagonal cowlicks in star. Left hind pastern white on inside, lower in front. White on inside of heel. Chestnut spots on coronet. Right hind coronet white on inside extending on pastern. Chestnut spot in white. Cowlick at crest of neck on right side and cowlick on left side at poll.

Neither colt has been tattooed.

Keeneland Association has posted a $10,000 reward to anyone providing information leading to the recovery of the two yearling colts taken and for the apprehension and conviction of those persons responsible.

We would appreciate your being on the lookout for these horses and any and all information will be greatly appreciated.

Very truly yours,
William C. Greely
General Manager
Keeneland Association
Lexington, Ky.

Equine Reproduction Report

Sir:

I am writing to ask your help concerning the advertisement and distribution of the Proceedings of the First International Symposium on Equine Reproduction. This meeting, sponsored by the Thoroughbred Breeders' Association of Great Britain and held over five days in King's College, Cambridge in July, 1974, was attended by 227 scientists and veterinarians from 23 countries. All aspects of reproduction in the stallion, non-pregnant, pregnant and foaling mare were fully discussed, and the Proceedings, a 786-page volume containing nine colour and 27 half-tone plates, will be published in mid-October as a supplement of the Journal of Reproduction and Fertility at an inclusive price of 27.00 pounds ($67.50). While it is primarily of interest to equine veterinary surgeons, we, the Organizing Committee, feel strongly that it will also be of considerable value and interest to horse breeders.

We are naturally very anxious to sell as many copies of the book as quickly as possible in order to meet the very large publication and printing bill which will face us in December this year. To this end we are currently having printed a suitable advertising brochure and order form and may I ask if you would be kind enough to include one of these brochures in your next newsletter or similar "hand-out" to members of your association. The current high costs of postage make it impossible for us to post directly to members of horse breeding associations and so your help in this regard would be greatly appreciated.

Yours sincerely,
W. R. Allen
Cambridge
England

• Postal regulations prohibit enclosures of brochures such as suggested by Dr. Allen. Should any readers be interested in obtaining the brochure (or ordering the book), they may write to Dr. W. R. Allen, Animal Research Station, 307 Huntingdon Road, Cambridge, CB 3 OJQ, England.

Journal Hires Bill McDonald

Bill McDonald, formerly publicity director at the Shenandoah and Charles Town race tracks, has been named editor of the Horsemen's Benevolent and Protective Association's official publication, The Horsemen's Journal.

McDonald succeeds Don Meredith who recently resigned to become public relations director at the Laurel race course. Tony Chamblin, who preceded Meredith as editor of the Journal, is now the magazine's publisher.

The appointment of McDonald to the editorship is the second major change in the magazine's staff within the last four months. Harold Hopper, formerly with the Thoroughbred Record, became the Journal's advertising manager this past summer.

Although the average price for yearlings sold in the two selected sessions of the 15th annual Eastern Fall Sales at Timonium last month increased by six per cent over 1974 averages, there still lingered a vague feeling of disappointment over the results of Maryland's premier horse auction.

The sale provided two major changes in format from previous Eastern Fall Sales: For the first time horses were sold on a Sunday, and also for the first time an "open" session was tacked on to the end of the two selected sessions.

In my opinion, the open session was a marked success. As far as the two Sunday selling sessions were concerned, I felt that the afternoon auction (which began at 2 o'clock) failed to fire and was considerably weaker than the evening sale (which started at 8 o'clock).

The open session (held on Monday night) was, I thought, a good, solid auction. True, the horses didn't bring much — but they would have sold for less in almost any other auction.

The two sessions conducted on Sunday corresponded with the Monday and Tuesday evening auctions in previous years. In other words, what had been done on two days in previous sales was done this year entirely on one Sunday.

As expected, the crowds were large for both Sunday auctions.

When the final yearling was sold, the totals read: 155 auctioned (not including 31 charge backs) for $1,146,600 at an average price of $7,397.

These figures marked the second highest average on record (exceeded only by a $7,863 average for 191 head in 1973) and the fourth highest gross.

E. P. Taylor's Windfields Farm regained its position as the sale's leading consignor after finishing second last year to horses offered by Lewis Wiley as agent.

Windfields Farm sold 12 in the Sunday sessions for $164,000 — an average price of $13,667. This represented a big gain over 1974 for Mr. Taylor. Last year he sold 12 for $93,900, averaging only $7,825.

One unusual circumstance about the Taylor consignment was that for the first time no reserve prices were announced. Also unusual was that the Chesapeake City breeder sold every horse in his consignment. In all previous years he had taken home the few that failed to meet their reserves.

A more or less traditional runner-up to Mr. Taylor at the Eastern Fall is Miss E. S. Bromley of The Plains, Va. But this year Miss Bromley dropped to tenth place, experiencing her poorest sale since 1970.

Consigning three horses, the Virginia breeder grossed $34,700 for an average of $11,567. Last year she averaged $21,500 for four head. In 1973 her average was $35,000 for three.

The sale's top two horses this year were both consigned by Windfields.

The No. 1 colt was a bay son of Nearctic out of Talent Contest by *Forli. He was bought by James A. Bayard for $40,500. The underbidders were Orme Wilson and Michael Erlanger. The colt is the first foal from unraced Talent Contest. The second dam is stakes-winning Turn to Talent, the dam of the stakes-placed 2-year-old Hay Patcher.

Second highest priced yearling in the sale was Mr. Taylor's bay filly by Dancing Count out of Scottish Reel by Chieftain. She was bought by Beelu Farm on a bid of $25,000.

Five other yearlings brought in excess of $20,000, making the total seven at over $20,000 from 155 sold. This translates into 4.5 per cent of all yearlings offered in the two selected sessions.

The only similarity between the two selected sessions held on Sunday and Monday's open session was that they all were sold under the name of the Eastern Fall Sales. In previous years the Monday night horses would have been rejected from the EFS with the recommendation that they be sold in October's Maryland Fall Sales.

To me it seemed that Monday night's horses brought more money than would have been expected. They represented precisely the group which is suffering most from inflated training costs. They were, for the most part, useful prospects with limited earnings potential. In other words, very few bidders imagined themselves in action on a possible stakes performer.

In today's economy, stakes and allowance runners are money-makers. Claiming class yearling prospects cost too much money to develop in relation to their ultimate worth.

With these thoughts as guidelines, I felt that Monday's average of $3,061 was excellent — especially when compared to the $1,963 average recorded for yearlings at the 1974 Maryland Fall Sales. □

Taylor's Horses Have Many $$$ Behind Them

Expanding further in Cecil county, Mr. Taylor recently purchased Deepwell Farm from Kathleen Crompton, adding another 130-acre tract to his vast Maryland properties.

By Snowden Carter

For the fourth time in the past five years, Edward P. Taylor's Windfields Farm was the leading consignor at the Eastern Fall Sales.

Mr. Taylor sent 14 yearlings to the Timonium auction last month, sold all of them (in a departure from previous years, he had no announced reserve prices) and pocketed $170,500.

All 14 yearlings had been foaled and raised at Mr. Taylor's "private" 1,000-acre Windfields Farm in Chesapeake City which is not to be confused with his 600-acre nearby "public" farm at which he stands eight stallions and accepts outside boarders.

Although it may sound demeaning to describe the Cecil county properties as "factories," this is in effect actually what they are. In acreage, beauty and attention to minute detail the two Windfields farms constitute the finest horse factories in Maryland.

Some idea of the size of the operation can be gained simply by noting that since Mr. Taylor acquired his first piece of Maryland real estate 12 years ago he has constructed 21 houses for his help. Nine other houses extant when the farms were purchased are also used by farm employees.

There are 40 year-round employees at the two farms. An additional 15 are hired during the breeding season.

The man in charge of all of Mr. Taylor's horse operations is Joe Thomas who went to work for the Canadian industrialist 20 years ago, quitting a job with the Daily Racing Form. Thomas divides his time between Maryland and Canada, his wife maintaining houses at both the Canadian and Maryland Windfields Farms. For every horse owned by Taylor in Maryland, there are two in Canada — a circumstance which causes Thomas to move frequently between his two houses.

First lieutenant to Thomas in Maryland is Joe B. Hickey, Jr., who, if he had a title, would be termed assistant to the vice-president in charge of Thoroughbred operations.

Hickey, who left a public relations job at Pimlico six years ago to accept the Windfields post, lives year-round in Maryland and is Thomas's on the spot representative. Says Thomas: "Without Joe Hickey, I couldn't make it. He's my right arm in every phase of our Maryland operation."

Watching one of his yearlings being sold at the Eastern Fall Sale, Mr. Taylor is flanked by Joe B. Hickey and Joe Thomas.

Lower Standards Criticized

Maryland's experiment last month with a greater number of yearlings catalogued for the Eastern Fall Sales has met with strong reactions from different segments of the industry.

As most breeders are well aware, the sale this year was expanded to three sessions instead of the normal two. The third session (held Monday night) was for those yearlings which failed to meet normal Eastern Fall standards (either pedigree or conformation) but were still above the line of total Eastern Fall rejection.

In other words, Sunday's two selling sessions represented the normal Eastern Fall catalogue. Monday night's single session was for the intermediate yearling. The horses sold on Sunday averaged $7,397 — up 6 per cent from the 1974 Eastern Fall Sales. Monday night's yearlings averaged $3,061 — a figure which has no previous year comparison.

Two of the strongest critics of the three-session format are Joe B. Hickey, Jr., and Robert A. Leonard, both of whom feel that the EFS has been badly damaged by the admission of the lower quality yearling. Both Hickey and Leonard are involved in the production of high quality horses, Hickey being assistant to Joe Thomas at Windfields Farm and Leonard being managing partner at Glade Valley.

Says Hickey: "I hate to be quoted on this issue because right away people will say that I'm speaking for Windfields Farm and Mr. Taylor. But the truth is that I am not speaking for Windfields. I am looking at it from the viewpoint of what is good for Maryland breeders as a whole and what is good for the Eastern Fall Sale.

"In my opinion Maryland must decide whether it wants to become recognized as a state that produces quality yearlings or whether it wants to sink back into the cheap market that we've tried so hard to overcome.

"I feel that the Maryland industry will profit by having a selected yearling auction at which the average price is around $10,000. This can never happen if standards are lowered to the point they were for this year's third session.

"I want to make it perfectly clear that Windfields Farm was pleased with the prices we got for our yearlings. We have no complaint. What I am disturbed about is the image the Eastern Fall will have for out of state buyers in the years ahead.

"People won't travel hundreds of miles from New York and New Jersey to attend a sale where the average is $3,000. But they will make the trip if they know the horses are of the $10,000 and up category. So I feel very strongly that we should offer a catalogue that is absolutely the best we can provide. To enlarge it past two sessions is to weaken it, damage it and do future sessions serious harm.

"I think, too, that we've got to do something in the way of creating a demand for Maryland-breds. Right now it doesn't make five cents worth of difference whether a horse is a Maryland-bred or a New Jersey-bred.

"What I think we ought to do is work for some big Maryland-bred 2-year-old stakes in the Maryland Fund program. Races of $50,000 value. That sort of thing. When yearling buyers become aware that the following season they'll have horses eligible for $50,000 purses in restricted races — then the value of the Maryland-bred will go up dramatically.

"It works in Canada. And it can work here."

Dr. Leonard is also adamant in his position regarding the third session to the Eastern Fall Sales. The Frederick county veterinarian is currently a direc-

Beneath Thomas and Hickey in the pyramid of management come Robert Bennett and Russell Alexander. Bennett is in charge of the public farm, Alexander the private one. Working with those two managers is Windfields' resident veterinarian, Joe Campbell.

The two horse factories represent an investment of roughly 15 million dollars — more than half of that sum being the horses themselves which 74-year-old Mr. Taylor quarters at his two Maryland farms.

Mr. Taylor's eight Maryland stallions (some of which he owns wholly, others are syndicate-owned) have a value in excess of 8 million dollars, by conservative estimate. The two most valuable are Northern Dancer (America's leading sire in 1971) and Tentam, both on the books at 2.4 million dollars. Halo is valued at 1.2 million, Protanto and Impressive at three-quarters of a million each and Rambunctious at $200,000.

No approximate value is available on Dancing Count and Search for Gold, the youngest and least tried of the Windfields stallions. Suffice it to say that both are popular and have the potential to become million dollar properties.

Despite the present size of Windfields Farms' breeding program (Mr. Taylor maintains 50 broodmares here), there was no plan to breed horses in Maryland when Mr. Taylor bought his first farm across the road from Mrs. Richard C. duPont in 1963.

His thought at that time was to use the Maryland real estate as a training headquarters. He planned to run off the farm and accordingly built both a one-mile dirt track and a seven-furlong turf course.

Obviously, his plans have changed over the years.

For one thing, he no longer runs off the farm — for the very good reason that he didn't win many races when he operated in that fashion. Farm training today consists of breaking yearlings, legging up 2-year-olds and repairing race-damaged runners.

Although he is able to spend little time in it, Mr. Taylor has built for himself and his wife a handsome brick residence which overlooks pasture fields, barns and the training tracks. A maid works regularly in the house, cleaning and polishing in preparation for her boss's next visit.

Quite close to Mr. Taylor's home sit 15 open acres on which someday may be built shops appropriate to the area. Those open acres are owned by Mr. Taylor, Mrs. duPont and her two children and Leonard Sasso. Mr. Sasso, also a prominent Maryland horse breeder, owns a large farm which adjoins Mrs. duPont's.

This open area is referred to by Hickey as the St. Augustine project. He explains that the owners feared encroachment of commercial ventures. So, to protect the character of the area, they laid out on paper their own idea of what would look appropriate to the rural area — and then set aside the property on which those shops might one day be constructed. Already on those 15 acres are a 200-year-old church (which Mrs. duPont regularly attends) and five residential dwellings.

Adds Hickey: "Mr. Taylor and Mrs. duPont are both willing to do everything possible to improve the appearance of the area. They fear subdivision and suburbia. Frequently they buy old properties, repair them and resell them. Nothing seems to upset Mr. Taylor more on one of his visits than to see a house going up in the middle of what had been a pasture field.

"I don't want this to sound like they're resisting the efforts of the average man to build a house on his property. That's not it at all. What they're trying to do is keep the countryside beautiful for everyone. And you don't have to be rich to appreciate things like that."

Mr. Taylor's most recent real estate purchase was 130-acre Deepwell Farm, formerly owned by Kathleen Crompton. This lovely estate adjoins the Middletown Pony Club property and is quite close on the other side to Mr. Taylor's public Windfields Farm.

Says Hickey: "I don't think that we really needed it. But Mr. Taylor was worried about how it might go downhill if it fell into the wrong hands. So, as a protection as well as an investment, he made an offer which was accepted. I think probably he'll lease it out if he can find the right person." □

tor of the Maryland Horse Breeders Association and is a past chairman of the Sales Committee.

In words quite similar to Mr. Hickey's, Dr. Leonard argues that only by limiting the catalogue to the 200 best yearlings available can the Eastern Fall Sales attain national recognition. He, too, hopes for a sales average of $10,000. "Anyone who sells a yearling for less than $10,000 is taking a loss whether he realizes it or not," said Dr. Leonard. "This is a business and we've got to learn to handle our sales to take care of people who pay attention to their business."

There is, however, no unanimity within the industry regarding the size of the Eastern Fall Sales catalogue.

Three breeders with large farms who endorse the three-session format are Bill Hebb, Charles McGinnes and Frank Hopkins. All three pointed out that more breeders were helped this year than ever before.

Said McGinnes: "A high average is naturally desirable. But is it the single most over-riding objective? Isn't the real purpose of the sale to provide a good marketplace for as many breeders as possible? I think the high average is subordinate to the main goal — that of helping the breeder sell his yearlings."

J. William Boniface, chairman of the MHBA's Sales Committee, states that his committee remains divided on the issue.

"We had a meeting a week after the sale," he reports, "and by majority vote we decided to recommend to our Board that the 1976 sale be cut back to two sessions. But I don't know how our Board will react, nor what Fasig-Tipton will recommend. All that you can say for sure right now is that it's a hot potato." □

Rambunctious No. 1 In Maryland

Not surprisingly, Maryland's leading sire for the first ten months of 1975 is one of the eight stallions standing at Edward P. Taylor's Windfields Farm in Chesapeake City.

But the identity of that leading sire does come as a surprise.

The horse is Rambunctious who is the least expensive of all the Taylor stallions, having cost "only" $200,000 when purchased prior to the 1970 breeding season.

It's quite something for little Rambunctious to have edged Northern Dancer (America's leading sire in 1971) and Windfields' other top stallion Impressive as well as Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Restless Native who led the 1974 stallion standings in Maryland. Restless Native stands at Mr. Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm in Baltimore county and in the ten-month summaries for the 1975 season stood second to Rambunctious.

Reflecting the increasing popularity of Rambunctious, Windfields Farms' Joe Hickey reports that at last month's yearling auctions in Canada a daughter of Rambunctious sold for $61,500. "This," he added wryly, "has to be a world record for any yearling sired by Rambunctious."

The 15-year-old stallion stands for a live foal fee of $2,500. His offspring this year have earned approximately $600,000 with Ramhyde at $55,000 his single biggest winner.

By comparison, Maryland's No. 2 stallion, Restless Native, is represented by that outstanding race mare Twixt who has earned over $120,000 in 1975.

Says Hickey: "I don't guess Rambunctious will ever come up with a big horse like Twixt. But year after year he has a lot of little horses in there winning race after race. And if those little horses win enough races, they can all add up to more than what a mare like Twixt will earn.

"You know it really delights me to see Rambunctious get to the top of the list. It was mostly on my advice that Mr. Taylor bought him five years ago. We were at that time looking for a horse to syndicate — we had never syndicated one before in Maryland.

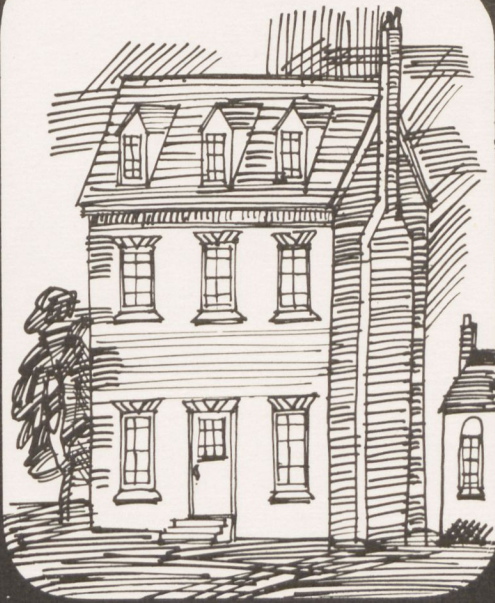

"We learned a lot about syndicates from the experience we gained with Rambunctious."

Bred and raced by the late Mrs. Milton Erlanger, Rambunctious is by *Rasper II out of *Danae II. He made only seven starts (all at 2) and won six times, including the World's Playground and New Jersey Futurity. His earnings totaled $101,076.

The horse made his first season at stud in 1963 at Mrs. Erlanger's Woodside Farm in New Jersey. His 1964 foal crop consisted of only one foal. Moved to Glade Valley Farm in Maryland the following year, Rambunctious did considerably better, siring four colts and nine fillies in 1965.

Rambunctious remained at Glade Valley for three years, then was returned to Mrs. Erlanger's New Jersey farm for the 1967 season. Still far from being a popular sire, he was transferred in 1968 to Harold Herman's Red Oak Farms in Poolesville, Md., remaining there until sold by Mr. Herman at the conclusion of the 1969 season to Windfields.

So far Rambunctious's best offspring has been Rollicking, a winner of nearly $200,000. Rollicking's oldest foals are now yearlings and were quite well received at last month's Eastern Fall Sales averaging $10,400. □

Something for Everyone

Fair Hill's 36th annual fall meeting was held on two consecutive Saturdays last month with eight races each day and something for everybody. It was hard for hunt race fans not to find fun in Cecil county. Brush racing featured Augustus Bay winning the Grand National, first of steeplechasing's triple crown, which includes the Temple Gwathmey and the Colonial Cup. Timber racing enthusiasts were treated to a look at fresh talent in John Latta's Liquid Consolation. Bettors were able to show their stamina by betting exactas on jumping races while feminists rejoiced over Jennifer Rowland's two winning rides on Red Grasshopper.

Fair Hill's pastoral setting also afforded people who just like a day in the country an opportunity to sit in the sun on a nice fall day and appreciate a spacious view of fields and woods stretching off in the distance to the Chesapeake Bay.

Highlight of the two-day meet was the Grand National, a handicap for 4-year-olds and up with a purse of $12,500 and nine entries. It was won by a 9-year-old cripple, Augustus Bay, whose old bowed tendons seem never to slow him down. He is owned by Jane Clark and trained carefully by Rick Watters. His most distinguished race was last November's Colonial Cup in which he beat 11 starters including Gran Kan who belongs to Miss Clark's great-aunt Mrs. F. Ambrose Clark. Gran Kan won the Eclipse Award for steeplechasers in 1974.

After an eight-month rest, Augustus Bay finished third to Happy Intellectual and Afilador at Saratoga in August. On the first Saturday at Fair Hill he won a flat race. Nevertheless, he was overlooked by the bettors and paid a healthy $22.40 in the Grand National.

Mrs. Marion duPont Scott's Soothsayer and Gran Kan, who wore a yellow pom-pom in his forelock, were co-favorites in this race. Jonathan Sheppard's entry of George Strawbridge, Jr.'s Tall Award and Mrs. Colin Lofting's Speed Kills tempted the bettors along with trainer Paul Fout's entry of Beverly Steinman's Chrisaway and Virginia Guest's Life's Illusion, Maryland-bred winner of the Lovely Night and New York Turf Writers handicaps.

Quiet and well-mannered in the paddock as well as easily-rated during the race, Augustus Bay saved his energy for the last quarter-mile. Tom Skiffington, his rider, explained afterward, "He has a lot of speed, but has to run his race late. If you keep him covered, behind horses, he'll relax and then move out when you show him some daylight." Augustus Bay did just this. He dropped in behind Gran Kan at the beginning and let Woodcrest Farm's Fire Control and big bay Chrisaway fight for the lead throughout most of the two and one-half mile race.

The eleventh brush jump encountered a broadside of horseflesh when Fire Control, Chrisaway, Gran Kan, Speed Kills and Life's Illusion met it tightly bunched. Life's Illusion bobbled and may have lost the race there. Later, Speed Kills went to his knees at the next to last jump. By this time Augustus Bay was moving fast to overcome Gran Kan who finished second while Mrs. Ogden Phipps' Happy Intellectual was third and Soothsayer fourth.

After Miss Clark had received the old gold-plated cup, which is peeling a little and is given in memory of Mrs. Payne Whitney, she explained that Augustus Bay will go on to the Temple Gwathmey in Ligonier, Pa., and the Colonial Cup in Camden, S. C.

A lesser steeplechase was the feature of the first Saturday. It was the Manly, a two and three-sixteenths mile race for four-year-olds, won last year by Virginia Guest's Tarratine. The purse of $5,000 drew eight starters including Miss Guest's big mare, but it was little chestnut Jive, owned by Melinda Rogers of Nashville, Tenn., who won. He was conditioned by leading trainer Jonathan Sheppard and ridden by Dave Washer. This race marked the latter's first win at Fair Hill, but it was almost not to be because he had to survive a claim of foul by Joe Aitcheson, Jr., rider of Mrs. Scott's Anthropologist who finished second.

The trouble had occurred at the end of the backstretch over the last jump before the turn for home. Washer jumped it at an angle in order to make the turn while Aitcheson was on his inside. The stewards disallowed the claim. Coming over the last brush, Anthropologist bumped Jive, then cut in behind him to even things out, anyway. Behind Jive and Anthropologist came Raymond Guest's Casamayor, ridden by Jerry Fishback, and Mrs. Clay Brittle's Stretch II, ridden by her husband. Fishback vented his anger at Brittle by hitting him with his whip and picked up a $100 fine from the stewards. Yes, there was something for everybody at Fair Hill, including hot-tempered riders.

Both timber races were won by John Y. Latta's Liquid Consolation, a Maryland-bred by Frankie's Nod who was trained by W. N. Walsh and ridden by Paddy Neilson. The Trouble Maker on the first day raised mixed feelings in the fans' minds. While it was great to see 13 horses entered, it was discouraging to see only six finish.

When the starter dropped his orange flag for the timber event, 13 horses exploded over the green turf like a covey of quail from cover. Mrs. Rosalie Culver's Dosdi, ridden and trained by her son Charley Fenwick, opened up a good lead. He was followed by Johnny Bosley on Needa Win. As the action increased, the field shrank. Constance Heron's Some Kinda Nice pulled up after refusing the second fence, Royal Manifest flipped over the eighth, Sir Martin went off course then trailed the others, Taunton II lost his rider, then Needa Win pulled up. By the tenth fence Paddy Neilson had Liquid Consolation safely in front and out of trouble. He commented afterward, "I like it messy as long as no one bothers me. My horse went perfectly the whole way."

Liquid Consolation finished a good ten lengths in front of Turney McKnight on his own Just a Tinch. Far back came Nalanx and owner-rider Toinette Phillips, followed by Dosdi, J. P's Henry and Bent Page. Although Eagle's Top and Astrographer jogged over the finish line, they were not considered finishers.

On the second day and against more experienced jumpers who were entered in the Cecil County steeplechase, Liquid Consolation proved he was still the best. Paddy said,

"We threw him to the wolves today. Why, all the good jumpers were there. All except Jacko, that is." While this might be a slight exaggeration, the nine starters included Charles S. Bird, Jr.'s Fort Devon. He had won this race last year and then came back in the spring to win Maryland's Grand National timber race as well as finish second to Jacko in the Maryland Hunt Cup. Turney McKnight's Gun Mount and Charley Fenwick's Happy Orphan were two other older jumpers who were highly favored. Michael Plumb, Olympic three-phase event rider, was on his big chestnut mare Amerasian.

Tina Wetherill's Gabby S. and Verne Has-ta's Taunton II raced to the front early in the race. There were no falls, but poor Taunton II broke down and Doug Small pulled Astrographer up after the tenth jump.

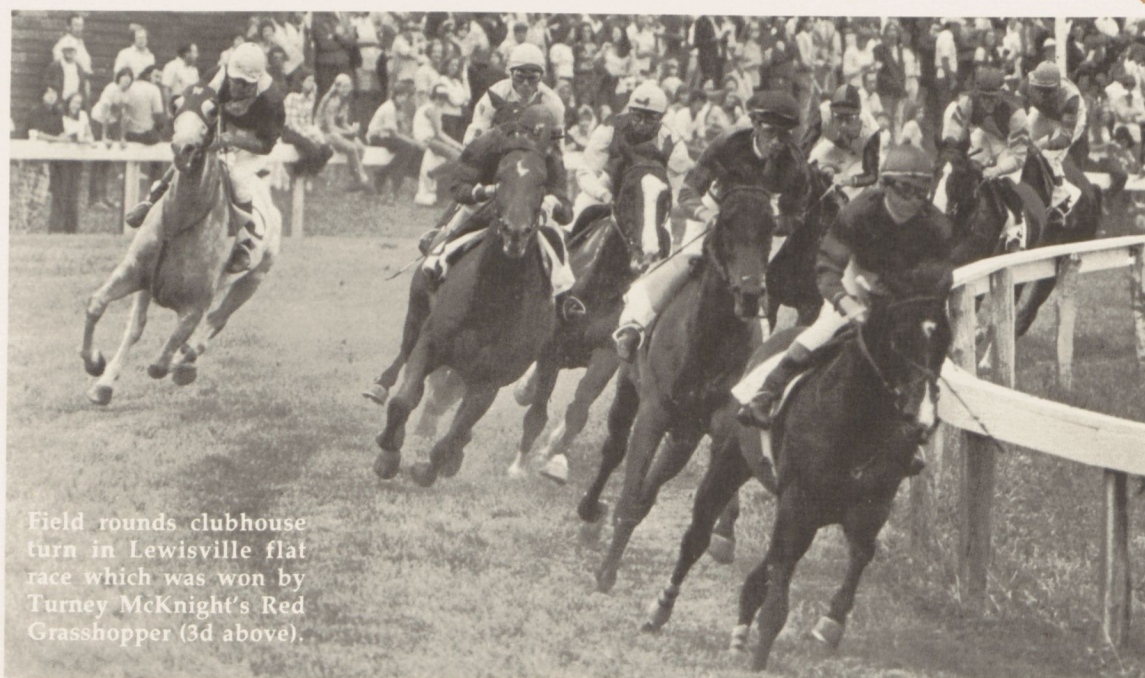

Amerasian held a brief lead at the twelfth but was overtaken by Happy Orphan and Liquid Consolation who pulled away to win. Happy Orphan was second, Fort Devon closed fast to be third while Gabby S. was fourth. Then came Gun Mount, Amerasian and Baudry.

Although Liquid Consolation was bred by W. T. Leatherbury, father of a leading trainer of flat horses, King Leatherbury, the horse never raced on the flat, according to Neilson. He has been undefeated this year in three starts, winning all his races at Fair Hill, one in May and two in September.

With more and more girls riding at Fair Hill, their success should warm the cockles of the feminists' hearts. For example, Toinette Phillips rode hard to steer Nalanx clear of loose horses in The Trouble Maker and finished third. Then Jennifer Rowland won a flat race each Saturday with Turney McKnight's Red Grasshopper, again surviving a claim of foul by Willie Moore who felt she came over on him. "If this had happened at Timonium no one would have noticed," said Jennifer. Apparently the stewards agreed.

Fair Hill's popularity was plain to see on the second Saturday, a clear, crisp, fall day. A record crowd jammed the little wooden stands and stood in long lines at the parimutuel windows, the only ones found at a hunt meet. People were enjoying themselves. Little children collected fistfuls of discarded tickets, other people's dreams of wealth. Old timers exchanged stories in the sun while a baby dozed in his pram under the trees of the paddock. A matron was overheard explaining, "We debated going up to Belmont for the Marlboro, but it was such a lovely day we came to Fair Hill instead." □

Part 7

By Snowden Carter

His jockey's agent days behind him, Chick Lang began a 5-year stint as No. 1 troubleshooter for Lou Pondfield at Pimlico and Charles Town.

Had it not been for champion jockey Bill Hartack, Chick Lang would never have risen to his present prominence in the world of Thoroughbred racing. As agent for the record setting rider, Lang widened his circle of friends, becoming intimately associated with many of the industry's most important figures.

Among those key individuals was the late Louis Pondfield, general manager of the Pimlico race track. From 1960 to 1965, Pondfield was to replace Hartack as the most important man in Chick Lang's life.

As Chick recalls it, his relationship with Hartack was coming to an end early in 1960. "I had decided," says Lang, "that Billy and I could no longer work as a team. We were dissatisfied with each other. I was fed up with him, and he felt the same way about me.

"Since it was becoming common knowledge that we were about to split, I started to put out feelers for another job. I definitely did not want to continue as an agent. I was offered the books of both John Rotz and Braulio Baeza. But I turned them down. Frankly, I wouldn't have worked for Earl Sande — or even my father, if he had been alive.

"What I was looking for was a job as a trainer or as an official.

"So in April of 1960 at Gulfstream, Lou Pondfield drew me aside one day and said he'd like to talk to me about a job at Pimlico. He said he needed somebody who could work as a liaison man between himself, the racing secretary (Charles J. McLennan) and the horsemen. The job would involve traveling to tracks in New Jersey, New York and Chicago and telling the horsemen there what Maryland — and particularly Pimlico — had to offer.

"After Lou got through explaining it, I told him that I'd take the job.

"Lou was surprised by my quick decision. He said: 'Chick, we haven't even talked money yet.'

"I told him that right then money wasn't the first thing on my mind.

"So he said, okay, the salary was $7,500. This was a big cut for me. With Hartack I had been making from $25,000 to $30,000. But I didn't hesitate. The job was the thing I wanted. The money could come later.

"When I got back to Pimlico, the publicity director, Charley Johnson, told me I had acted too quickly. Charley said that Lou was prepared to pay me $10,000. But when he found out that I'd take less, he offered less.

"Then Marge Lindheimer (Arlington-Washington Park) called me from Chicago and offered me $15,000 to go to work for her. But I told her no, that I had in a sense come home. That Baltimore was my town. I was tired of living out of a suitcase.

"I took that Pimlico job with no idea of what my title would be. Then when the first meeting opened, I saw on the program that my title was 'assistant director of racing.' That kind of baffled me because there was no director of racing listed. So I asked Charley Johnson who the hell was the director of racing. He said: 'Lou Pondfield. He's the director of everything.'

"Lou's first assignment for me was to examine Pimlico's stable area and report back to him on the plusses and minuses. Well, I went over the stable area as critically as I could. And what I decided was that the whole thing was a disgrace. I gave it to Lou like he asked for it. When I got through, he said: 'Well, you've told me about all the minuses. How about the plusses?' I shook my head and said that there weren't any.

"I said that the first thing that needed attention was the track kitchen. And the second was the rest rooms. He said: 'Do you realize what those improvements would cost?' I told him that if what he wanted was an improved relationship with the horsemen, then it didn't matter what the program would cost.

"At that time, Pimlico had seven year-round men working on plant maintenance. Today we have 21.

"Mr. Pondfield was in my opinion a brilliant general manager. He's remembered for his mistakes which is unfortunate. For every mistake, he made a hundred difficult correct decisions. And he was never afraid to make those decisions — that's an important thing for any general manager.

"I learned lessons from the two decisions over which Lou took the most abuse. One was his decision to close the Rogers avenue gate one year when we were having a bad meeting. Costs had to be cut, so he looked over the sheets and decided to eliminate that entrance. The saving didn't amount to as much as $100 a day, at the most. Well, the roof fell in on him. The fans and newspapers tore him up. Within a couple of days, the gate was reopened.

"The second thing that stands out was when we got such a small field for the Preakness Prep, that Lou decided the winner didn't deserve to get the trophy he had bought for the race. So instead of giving it to the winner, he took it up to Charles Town

Louis Pondfield

(which Pondfield was also running) and presented it up there to the winner of a feature race.

"Well, what I learned from those two lessons was that you never economize in a way that shows. Take, for example, a football game. One of the defensive lineman may make a terrible error. Because of his mistake, the passer completes a throw to one of his ends. Who gets blamed? The lineman or the defensive back? You can bet it'll be the defensive back. Because he's out there in the open for everybody to see. Nobody knows what happened in the line where the real mistake was made.

"And that's the way I operate. If I've got to do something cheap, I'm going to do it where it doesn't show. In all probability, the public will never know what happened.

"Anyway, getting back to Lou, we had a warm relationship. I never considered myself to be his gopher (i.e. errand boy), but I guess a lot of other people did. He treated me with respect, and he valued my opinion. At the time we were running two tracks, both owned primarily by Ben and Herman Cohen. The second track was Charles Town.

"At Charles Town I was sort of like a utility infielder. Whenever somebody didn't show up for work, I took his job. At different times I was a patrol judge, placing judge, steward and entry clerk.

"Lou had a difficult personality. He was abrasive. He told me repeatedly that to succeed at the job he had to 'straighten out' his associates. He said: 'If you don't, they'll walk all over you.'

"I remember one morning in the secretary's office when he jumped all over Raymond Archer. For no reason at all. Raymond hadn't started a horse in two or three days. And we were short on entries. So he publicly abused this trainer — who had a big stable of horses. I thought Lou was wrong, and I told him so. One thing you'll never see me do is publicly embarrass anybody.

"Maybe I lean too much in the other direction. At least Ben Cohen says I do. According to him, if I were a girl I'd spend my life being pregnant because I never say no to anybody. That's his opinion. Not mine. I think I say no whenever I have to — even if I don't enjoy doing it."

For five years Lang served Pondfield as a sort of Number 1 troubleshooter.

Then, in 1965, the Cohen brothers (who owned Pimlico and Charles Town) came to a splitting of the ways with their general manager.

Pondfield was given a generous retirement program by Pimlico and was permitted to stay on as general manager of Charles Town. But he was out at the big track — and he made no attempt to conceal his bitterness.

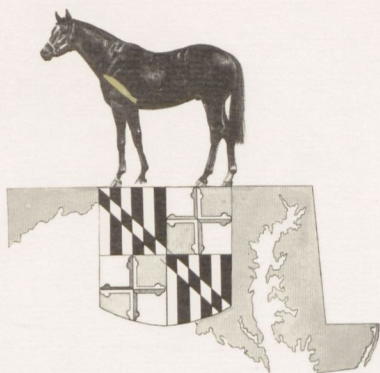

Quite naturally, Lou expected his protege to go with him to Charles Town. He demanded it. And he was furious when Lang steadfastly refused to leave Pimlico.

"You know," says Lang, "Lou never spoke to me again for the rest of his life. That hurt me then, and it hurts me even now to talk about it. We had been very close. I had great respect for him. He taught me everything I know about this job. And I'll tell you, it's a lot different working on the management side of the counter, instead of on the horsemen's side.

"Well, I remember the last time I saw Lou (he died in 1973). I was in Florida distributing stakes blanks for Pimlico's spring meeting. This was something Lou and I had done together back in the 1960's.

"I was going up an escalator at Hialeah. Had all these stakes blanks tucked up under one arm. If Lou had been with me, he'd have carried half of them. Well, for some reason there didn't seem to be anybody else riding this escalator — either up or down. I was all alone. And then I looked up and there's one guy coming towards me on the down escalator. It was Lou. He kept his head straight ahead, never even gave me a flicker of an eye movement. We passed like two ships in the night — slowly, steadily."

Next month — Chick Lang recalls how he became Pimlico's general manager and also relives his friendship with Spiro Agnew.

BELAIR

By Jean A. Crook

Belair Stud, which was until 1955 the oldest continuing Thoroughbred farm in America — spanning three centuries — is today the home of the Prince Georges County Police Department and the site of hundreds of little houses.

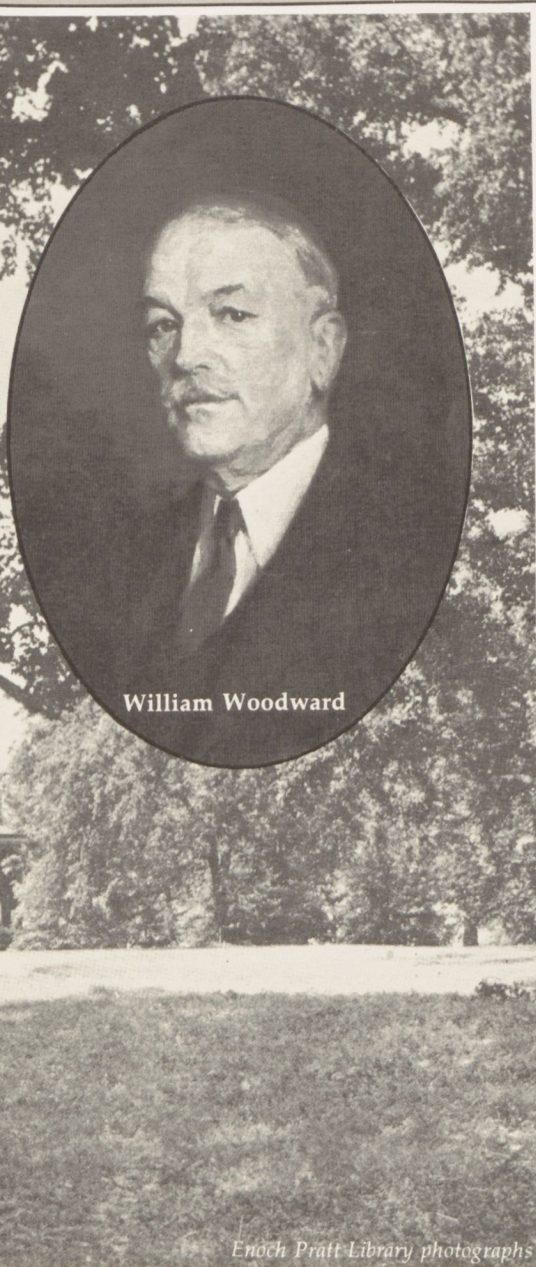

Belair (in the eighteenth century “Bell-air”) was built in 1740 by Benjamin Tasker. The Honorable Mr. Tasker was one of the most important men in Maryland at that time, being president of the Council for 32 years and acting governor of Maryland in 1752 and 1753. His beautiful daughter, Anne, married another governor, Samuel Ogle, and Anne’s father gave them his great estate, Belair. Their portraits, painted by the artist Hudson, are in the possession of the Tayloe family of Mount Airy, Va.

Samuel Ogle, captain of Cavalry in England, received his commission as governor of Maryland on December 16, 1731. But a year later Ogle went into brief retirement when Charles Calvert, fifth Lord Baltimore, came to Maryland to be Proprietary. Ogle was, however, recommissioned in 1733. Samuel Ogle, who was born in Great Britain in 1694, showed his interest in the improvement of horses in Maryland by importing the Spanish Barb. This was later followed by the importation of the stallion Spark and the filly Queen Mab (who was of Darley blood) in 1747.

The Ogles lived in fine style at Belair, but only during the hunting season! (During the social season they preferred to reside at their townhouse in Annapolis.) Belair was a 3,600-acre estate containing a 600-acre deer park enclosed by a six foot high wall, a lawn with terraced gardens, racetrack, kennels full of hunting dogs, and a mansion which was planned for a hunting lodge but most certainly afforded space and elegance for a permanent residence. Life was planned after the style of the English country gentleman. Anne drove a four-in-hand carriage with liveried outriders, and there is no doubt from letters still in existence that she loved her grandeur.

After Ogle's death, his brother-in-law, Col. Benjamin Tasker, Jr., took possession of Belair. He imported the noted stallion Othello and the great mare Selima. Selima achieved undying fame on the race course in December, 1752, by winning a $10,000 inter-colonial race against four rivals owned by Virginia turf magnates William Byrd III, Francis Thornton and John Tayloe II. Selima achieved even greater fame at stud, however. She was the dam of ten foals (three by Othello), nine of which became celebrities. After the death of Col. Tasker, she was purchased by John Tayloe II, who took her to his Mount Airy stud in Virginia where she spent the rest of her life. However, her name remains identified with Maryland racing through the Selima Stakes run each year in Laurel, and the Selima Room of the Prince Georges County Library at Bowie which houses a large collection of turf and equine volumes.

In the nineteenth century a later governor of Maryland, Oden Bowie, acquired part of Belair (but not the mansion). Belair reached the zenith of its fame in the twentieth century, under the ownership of William Woodward and his son, when such horses as Gallant Fox, Omaha, Flares, Granville, Fene-lon, and the great Nashua wore its colors.

A description of Belair in 1931 by Paul Wilstach in his book Tidewater Maryland notes, "Belair seems to lead us into the heart of England, whereas, in its present sympathetic and expert upkeep, it probably presents us just as surely to a finished reproduction of the best type of Tidewater planter's completed estate. The house and its environs are screened from the highway by forest. When that is penetrated the way to the front door leads up a majestic avenue, originally five hundred yards long and planted on each side with double rows of tulip trees many of which survive, some of them to attest their great age with a circumference of twenty feet. The house, which, in its present extended state, represents the new as well as the old, is of brick and is two and a half stories high, and so nicely balanced are the wings and central block that, under its scarves of ivy, it seems of a single and quite ancient age unit. It stands on an eminence from which it commands the (Patuxent) river valley for many miles . . . The site was picked and the house was built by Benjamin Tasker . . . Here the Ogles lived in splendid plantation state . . . The deer park at Mount Vernon was stocked from the droves at Belair. In Maryland Belair is sometimes referred to as 'the house of the Governors,' for it was built by one governor, to become the home of another governor . . . and passed to his son, the Benjamin Ogle who was governor from 1798 to 1801. Later it passed to the Bowies, so that by the connections of the Ogles and Bowies it drew Governor Bladen, Governor Lowndes and other governors into the meshes of its distinguished associations . . ."

Oldtimers in the community today recall Belair as a place where they fished in the little lake which was stocked thickly with bass, and hunted in the woods — the trees of which "were so big that a child could hide in the hollow of some of them." There were crowned paths maintained through the woods, and the woods themselves were kept well cleared by cattle walking through them.

In 1955, all of this pastoral beauty came abruptly to an end when William Woodward, Jr., was accidentally shot and killed at age 35 by his wife, Ann, who mistook him for a burglar. (Early this month, at age 57, Ann Woodward was found dead in her New York apartment, the apparent victim of a heart attack.)

Executors of the Woodward estate decided to dispose of the Belair Thoroughbreds by sealed bids for Nashua, the broodmares, weanlings, horses in training, and yearlings. On December 15, the bids were opened in New York. Nashua became the first Thoroughbred ever to be sold for one million dollars or more. There were five bids of more than a million, but the highest was one of $1,251,200 made by Leslie Combs II on behalf of a syndicate which included C. J. Devine, John W. Hanes, P. A. B. Widener, Harry M. Warner, R. W. McIlvain, and Mereworth Farm. (Before this time, the highest price paid for a horse was $700,000 given in 1952

The Belair property was sold to a developer. Remaining today are a few of the giant tulip poplars, an avenue of beeches (incorporated into the residential development), a stable which is usually locked and the little lake with its picturesque stone bridge. Also surviving is the mansion, which serves as an office building. Those within complain that it is the worst office building around — which of course it probably is, because it was intended as a beautiful residence in days of old. □

Trailer Tailor

Story by Geraldine T. Garrett
Photographs by Walter M. Ball

"I don't need plans or blueprints. I just start from scratch and build any kind of horse trailer a person wants." Thus Charles N. (Buck) Buckingham describes the work at his shop four miles north of Elkton.

The 44-year-old welder explains: "For Quarter Horses we construct a trailer with a 5' x 5' floor space; for Thoroughbreds the dimensions are 7' x 7'. That's floor space — not counting the manger in front. We also build a stock trailer that accommodates six head of cattle. Then there's a gooseneck that will hold eight horses or other livestock. We've never made a pony trailer — but, sure, I'd try it."

We includes the Buckingham family, each member of which contributes to the growing business. Buck notes the work of his wife, the former Alta Warrington: "Without her, I'd be nowhere. She does the payroll, taxes, keeps books, and makes bids. When a customer comes in and wants, say, a certain type of trailer, Alta is there, looking up the cost of material, estimating labor, and punching away at the adding machine.

"Her father got me interested in welding in the first place. When I went to pick her up for a date, he'd put me to work welding before I could take her out. Later I did take an 11-week advanced course at Lincoln Electrical School in Euclid, Ohio. Alta, though, she's everything."

Buckingham mentions with pride the accomplishments of his 18-year-old daughter Leslie. "She's finished high school and is a welder, too. One of my competitors hired her to make tiny valves. I wanted her to have the experience of working with somebody besides me. Women can generally outweld men because it's a job that demands patience and attention to detail.

"The 14-year-old, Stephen, is coming on strong as a welder, but it's a little too soon to tell about Roland. He's only seven."

For a time Buck owned a string of Quarter Horses and built the first trailer for his own use. He has since sold the horses, but as word of his skill circulates, an increasing number of horsemen seek trailers made to their own specifications.

"When I took the first one to be tagged," he recalls, "the people at the Delaware Department of Motor Vehicles didn't believe it was homemade." (The Buckingham establishment is actually located just over the line in Delaware; it has a Delaware phone, 368-4314, but a Maryland mailing address — R. D. 4, Elkton.)

"I told them I wasn't picking the trailers off trees. Even invited them to come down and see us at work. Finally I had to make four appearances before the Bureau of Thefts to convince them I was actually building the trailers myself.

"It's a funny thing about tags," he muses. "In the West a man can pull a trailer with a licensed vehicle, and it's considered his privilege to transport his animals on a public highway. No tags are required on trailers. I don't know why Delaware, Maryland, and Pennsylvania demand that the trailer be licensed, too."

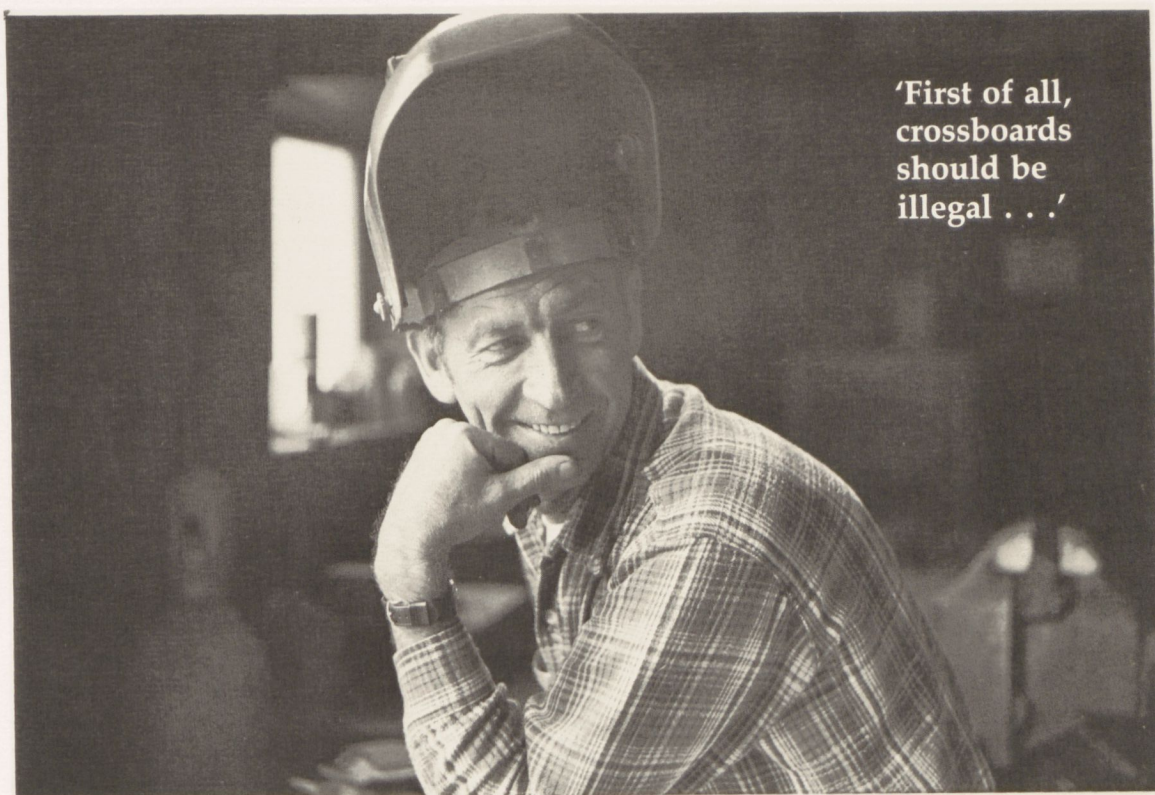

Along with constructing new trailers which range from $1,500 to $2,300, the Buckinghams repair and renovate old trailers and vans. "We'll put in a new front, back, or floor, do a paint job, or anything else that needs doin'."

The base of operations is a 50' × 50' building. "We've just been given the franchise for metal buildings, so in addition to the seven men I now employ, I'll be hiring eight more in the near future," Buck explains. "These buildings are used by horsemen and farmers as barns or equipment sheds. On a nearby farm they're using one as an indoor arena for horse shows. It averages out that metal buildings are twelve dollars a square foot cheaper than cement block. Five men can erect and insulate a structure that's 50' square and 15' high at the eaves in five days. And it's maintenance free.

has both feet in trouble. The floor boards should run longways with cross members beneath the front and hind feet. This construction ought to be standard.

"Secondly, every two- or four-horse trailer should have a hammer blow hitch. These are made in a mold and are safer and stronger than the tin ones. In fact, they'll upset the pulling vehicle before they'll lose the trailer. They're 5,000-pound hitches."

In speaking of the range of his experience, Buck notes: "I've been welding for twenty years and making trailers for a couple of years. We've made just under twenty trailers

'First of all, crossboards should be illegal . . .'

"Besides the trailers and buildings, we've done the welding on the bridges on I-95, and are doing the ones on 495; we do sandblasting and also make forges and stall jacks for blacksmiths.

"Oh, and up there is my sleigh," he says, pointing toward a loft above the workshop. "Just wanted to see if I could do it," he remarks, shrugging. "Guess I'll have to add wheels with the mild winters we've been having."

Buck has definite ideas on what makes a good, safe trailer. "First of all, crossboards should be illegal. If a board breaks, the horse and haven't had a complaint yet. We build buckboards and sulkies also — the fancy things they use in parades and shows."

A two-horse trailer takes a week to build; a six-horse, three weeks. First the frame is made of 2" × 4" × 1/4" steel; then the sides of 12-gauge steel are added. Roof bows are 1" square tubing, while the roof itself is 12-gauge steel. The floor is 2" treated oak because it resists the acid in manure and urine. Finally, the fenders, doors, glass and trim are put into place.

A variety of options are available to the buyer. He may want a dressing room, complete with paneling and carpet. Also, he could order a luggage or tack compartment. He may prefer a walk-through type with a door at the end, or he may like the side-escape. Owners of Quarter Horses often choose a step-up trailer because, as Buck says, "You could ask one of those horses to step up on the roof and he'd do it with no trouble." The ramp, on the other hand, is a safer bet for the Thoroughbred.

The trailer's color is frequently matched to that of the pulling vehicle. Owners could choose their racing colors with any stripe or design that appeals to them.

Buckingham trailers are found in Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, the state of Washington, and Tennessee. "Never put one of my own horses into that first trailer," Buck recalls. "I took it to Tennessee with the intention of buying Quarter Horses and bringing them home in it. In Mountain City, I sold the trailer and then had to buy a second-hand one to get my stock back."

When asked what qualities a man in his business needs, Buck answers thoughtfully: "Experience, common sense, and a little bit of brains. Not a whole bunch, but a little bit." □

For several years he was the leading consignee at the Saratoga yearling sales, and he many times reached into Europe to purchase a likely racing or breeding prospect. He was a wheeler-dealer in the purest sense of that phrase.

Because of his many lawsuits (and occasional arrests), it has been facetiously stated that he made more money for his lawyers than he did for himself. His career included an attempt to kidnap the Kaiser in World War I (at which time he was a captain). In World War II he became a lieutenant colonel.

Glenangus Farm was sold in June at public auction. It consisted at that time of 376 acres and was only a shell of its halcyon days. The buyer at $1.23 million was James T. Dresher.

Former jockey Manny Berg, a resident of Baltimore, died last month at the age of 66. Berg had worked in the mutuels department at Maryland tracks in recent years. He rode his first race in 1928 and was one of the nation's top riders during the 1930's. He is best remembered for his success with Howard Bruce's crack sprinter Jay Jay.

Obituaries

Larry MacPhail

Leland Stanford MacPhail died last month in a Florida nursing home at the age of 85. Known throughout the sports world as "Larry," the fiery and abrasive veteran of two World Wars had been a Thoroughbred breeder in Maryland for the past 30 years.

It was, however, baseball which provided Mr. MacPhail with a springboard to national prominence. It was he who introduced night games to the major leagues. He was also the innovator of beauty pageants at ball games, flying teams between two cities on road trips, old timers' day promotions, a pension fund for baseball executives and a clubhouse for patrons at Yankee Stadium.

As a breeder and owner of horses, Mr. MacPhail concentrated his activities at Glenangus Farm, located outside Bel Air. Although he campaigned several stakes winners, he never quite equaled in quality the goals that he had set for his horses.

Dr. LeRoy Robins

Dr. LeRoy Robins, for 15 years an owner and breeder of race horses, died suddenly last month from a heart attack. Dr. Robins was on the staff of the Washington Hospital Center and was a 1938 graduate of the George Washington Medical School. He had practised in the Washington area since 1942. Dr. Robins' best horses were the stakes-winning filly So Misty and the hard-hitting plater Little Seth who won 12 races and over $90,000. Dr. Robins' horses were trained by Winston B. Hill.

Kenneth F. Holmes

Kenneth F. Holmes, a well known public stable trainer, died last month at his home in Waldorf, Md., after a long illness. Mr. Holmes, 63, trained a useful stable of horses in Maryland until illness forced his retirement last year. One of Mr. Holmes' three sons, also named Kenneth, is a race track horse shoer.

What's New in Maryland

Ecole Etage At Mantua

Ecole Etage, winner of nearly a quarter-million dollars, has been permanently retired and will stand the 1976 season at Frank A. Bonsal, Jr.'s Mantua Farm near Glyndon.

Owned by the Bon Etage Farm of the Meyerhoff brothers, Ecole Etage is now in the process of syndication at $6,000 a share, payable in equal installments over a four-year period.

Foaled in 1970, Ecole Etage is by Bold Ruler's good son Disciplinarian who died after only two seasons at stud. Himself a winner of over $138,000, Disciplinarian has sired two stakes winners. Ecole Etage's dam, Sun Heiress, has produced two stakes winners and one stakes-placed horse. She is a half-sister to stakes winners More Sun and Sun Herod.

Ecole Etage, trained by Buddy Delp, won the General George Stakes and Riggs Handicap. He placed in ten other stakes to retire with earnings of $241,525.

Mr. Bonsal reports that Ecole Etage will stand for a fee of $1,500.

Brave Emperor To Thornmar

Syndicate-owned Brave Emperor has been moved to Thornmar Farm near Chestertown where he still stand the 1976 season for a live foal fee of $1,000. By *Ribot out of Bold Empress by Bold Ruler, the 8-year-old stallion had been standing at Shannondale Farm in Howard county since being retired to stud in 1972. Brave Emperor's oldest foals are now 2-year-olds.

A winner of two races, Brave Emperor also finished second to Silent Screen in the Champagne Stakes and third in the Pimlico-Laurel Futurity. He made only 12 starts as a 2 and 3-year-old, retiring with earnings in excess of $60,000.

His sire, *Ribot, was an undefeated classic winner of 16 races. Among *Ribot's offspring are Arts and Letters, Tom Rolfe, Ragusa and Graustark. Bold Empress, the dam of Brave Emperor, was a winner at 2 and 3 and is a full sister to Stupendous ($251,000).

Timonium Job To Pitts

Clinton Pitts, Jr. has been named racing secretary at Timonium for the 42-day 1976 meeting, succeeding Jim Bell, Jr., who resigned the post to work fulltime for racing secretary Frank Gabriel at Keystone Park.

Pitts, 34, had been Timonium's assistant racing secretary for the past four years, serving under Eddie Smith and Bell. He is also currently assistant racing secretary to Eual Wyatt at Laurel.

Pitts has been in racing for the last 15 years, first as a steeplechase rider and for the last seven years as an official. He also holds official jobs at Bowie and Pimlico.

In a riding career that was interrupted by 3½ years in the Marine Corps, Clinton achieved his greatest success with Gen. Richard K. Mellon's War Union. Under Pitts, War Union twice won the Noel Laing Handicap and was second in the International Gold Cup.

During his service with the Marines, Pitts was in action in Laos.

He lives in Monkton with his wife, Alva, and two children.

Kees, Magee Win Prizes

Barbara Kees and Noel Magee were each awarded prizes of $50 by the Timonium management for the tidiness of their stables during the 42-day Timonium meeting. The two trainers were singled out as maintaining the neatest shedrow in the stable area.

Bee Bee Bee, trained by Del Carroll, was Maryland's champion 2-year-old in 1971 and was also champion 3-year-old the following season. It was Bee Bee Bee's Preakness win which prevented Riva Ridge from sweeping the Triple Crown.

New Md.-Bred Stakes Winner

American History, a Maryland-bred who had never won a stakes race, achieved sudden prominence last month when he captured Belmont Park's $40,000 Count Fleet Handicap by seven lengths.

Owned by H. T. Mangurian, Jr., American History was bred by Mrs. Richard C. duPont who sold the colt at Saratoga in 1973 for $37,000. The 3-year-old is by Tom Rolfe out of Hem and Haw by Double Jay.

The Count Fleet was restricted to 3-year-olds which had not won a stakes at a mile or over since June 2. Singh was expected to rule favorite but was scratched when the track came up muddy.

American History, who is a half-brother to sw Delaware Chief ($128,000), had previously placed only once in a stake — the Everglades at Hialeah in which he finished second to Ascetic. American History did not run in the Triple Crown races.

Going into the Count Fleet, the colt bred by Mrs. duPont had lifetime earnings of $41,000. He earned $26,625 in the Count Fleet.

Despite the muddy track, American History was timed in an excellent 1.35 for the one mile distance. He performed as 9-5 favorite and was being eased up at the finish.

Dundee Marmalade At Stud

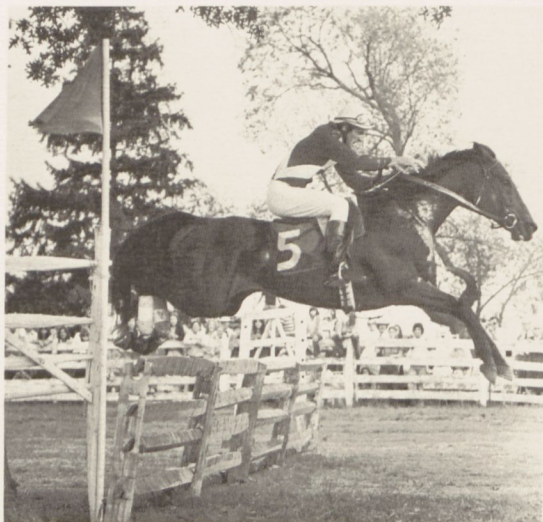

Alfred G. Vanderbilt has announced the retirement of his $207,000 winner Dundee Marmalade who will enter stud at Mr. Vanderbilt's Sagamore Farm next year for a live foal fee of $1,000.

By Sword Dancer out of the Nantallah mare Tea and Toast, Dundee Marmalade won the $50,000 Westchester Handicap and placed in the Flash S., Sanford S., Constellation H., Oceanport H., Jennings H., San Gorgonio Claiming S., El Monte H. and Camino Real H.

Foaled in 1968, Dundee Marmalade is out of a daughter of stakes-winning Cup of Tea. The latter is out of Teahouse, a full sister to Native Dancer.

As is the custom with all Sagamore stallions, 20 per cent of Dundee Marmalade's stud fee must be paid with the signing of the contract and is non-refundable.

Polinger To Race 25 Horses Here

After experimenting in recent seasons with the New York and California circuits, commission member Milton Polinger revealed last month that he has decided to shift the bulk of his racing stable back to Maryland.

Buddy Delp has been chosen to train Polinger's 25-horse stable.

Concurrent with this surprising announcement, Mr. Polinger disclosed the sale of his stakes-winning 2-year-old Gentle King to Arthur Foulks. The commissioner stated that he does not like to sell his best horses, but that he was forced into the decision in order to keep his stable in the black.

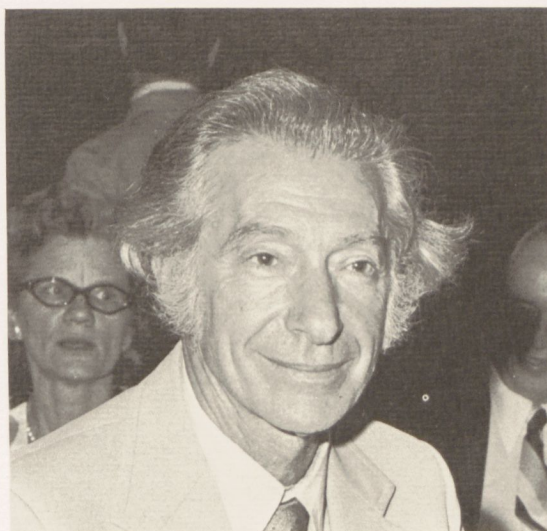

Said Polinger: "For an owner to have a reasonable chance of breaking even, purses need to be increased by about 50 per cent."

Although the main division of the Polinger stable will now be headquartered in Maryland, the building contractor said he will probably leave an additional five in New York and a similar number in California.

When Mr. Polinger became a member of the five-man Maryland Racing Commission some five years ago he stated that he intended to race his stable primarily out of state to avoid the possibility of a conflict of interest charge.

Asked how he happened to change that view, Polinger said: "Well, no one else seemed to feel that way. Jockey Club members race their horses in New York, Maryland's track owners race at their own tracks — everyone's doing it. So I've concluded that I'm a fool if I don't do it too. Besides, nobody has to guess about my horses because every time they start they're doing their best."

Mr. Polinger said he has become particularly disenchanted with New York because he feels it has come to the point where racing there is being run for the benefit of OTB. Comparing the money handled in New York against Maryland, he estimates the purses here are 60 per cent higher by ratio.

"Maryland's racing," he continued, "is holding up fairly well when you consider the competition from out of state." He added that he would like to see the Maryland tracks consolidated along the lines of the Miles Committee's recommendations — a report issued a number of years ago in which it was urged that all Maryland tracks be purchased by one non-profit organization.

If the Miles plan were to become a reality, then Polinger would favor a reduction in the state's share of the pari-mutuel takeout. He said he feels that the state's cut must be reduced if the industry is to remain viable.

An owner for 23 years, Mr. Polinger operates one of Maryland's largest breeding farms in Olney. Regarding that phase of activity, he said: "The cost of fertilizer has doubled within the last three years and the cost of feed is coming close to doubling. Training fees have gone up 40 per cent in four years. By comparison, purses have remained the same or even less."

Sonny Sims, the Polinger farm manager, says that in addition to standing seven stallions, Mr. Polinger owns 54 broodmares, 36 foals and 36 yearlings.

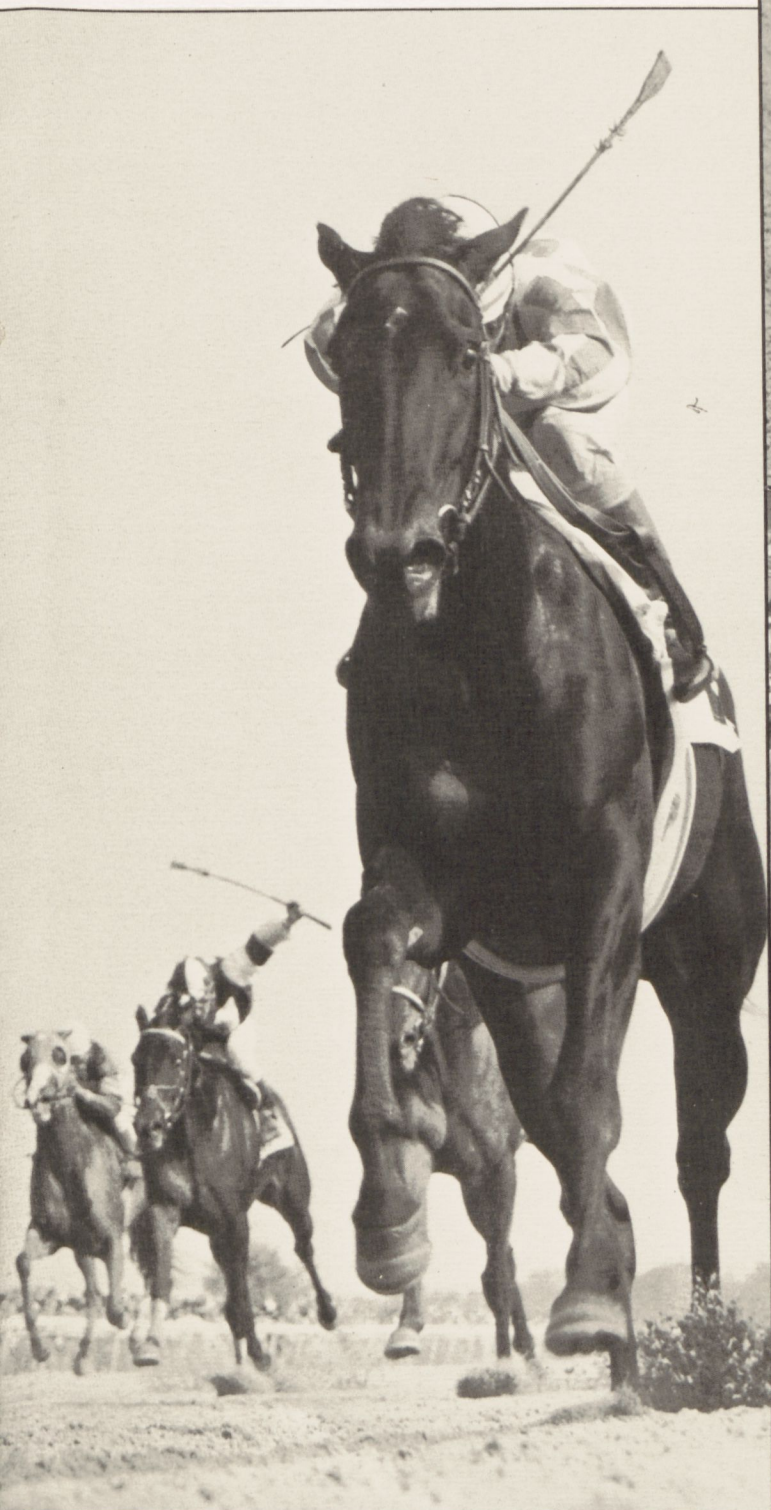

B. P. (Toughy) Hacker had been Polinger's Maryland-based trainer up until recent months. Regarding his switch to Delp, the commissioner said that he had first offered the stable to Hacker but that he declined because the number of horses involved was too great for his relatively small operation. □

MEMORANDUM

TO: American Horse Council Member Organizations
FROM: R. Richards Rolapp, Executive Vice President,
American Horse Council

Within the next six weeks the House Ways and Means Committee will report out a tax bill which may include provisions which are harmful to the breeding industry in this country. The American Horse Council is asking each of its members to join in efforts to delete these provisions before the Committee's final bill is reported to the full House of Representatives.

AHC is asking each of its 76 member organizations to make the same request of their individual members. It is the Council's hope that the horse industry will demonstrate to members of Congress that there are significant numbers of informed, concerned horsemen who are unwilling to see their business threatened by inequitable tax measures.

The Limitation of Artificial Accounting Losses (LAL) provision is harmful because its effect will be to defer deductions for costs incurred in the breeding and raising of horses until a later, uncertain date rather than when the losses are incurred. Additionally, the provision calls for complex accounting procedures which may compel many breeders to increase their legal and accounting costs in order to comply with the law. It is anticipated that both factors may force many breeders out of business, discourage new capital from the industry, and be detrimental to all facets of the horse business.

The prompt action of your members can make a difference. The Council suggests that they make their objections to this legislation known by:

- (1) Writing to their congressman, and asking him to bring their position to the attention of the Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee and to the other members of the Committee; and
- (2) Writing directly to the Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, stating their position; or
- (3) If their congressman is a member of Ways and Means, writing to him directly, sending a copy to the councilman.

Your support of the Council's efforts on behalf of the industry is appreciated. By working together with the other AHC organizations and by encouraging your individual members to play a part in these efforts, your organization is making a significant contribution to the future of the horse industry in this country.

Recommended Sample Letters To Congressmen

- Sample letter to be sent to Congressman Al Ullman, Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and to Representatives who are members of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Honorable Al Ullman
Chairman
Committee on Ways and Means
U.S. House of Representatives
Washington, D.C. 20515

Dear Congressman Ullman:

Because of my active involvement in the horse business, I am very concerned by the recent action of the Ways and Means Committee to limit the deduction of certain farm losses against nonfarm income. Under one of the Limitation of Artificial Accounting Losses (LAL) provisions tentatively adopted by the Committee, many of the costs of raising horses and other livestock cannot be taken as current deductions to the extent these expenses produce a net farm loss for the year.

It appears that this section, if enacted, would increase legal and accounting costs due to its complexity and would cause additional uncertainty in an already high risk business. Ultimately it could lead to the closing of many farm operations with resulting increases in rural unemployment and decreases in the hundreds of millions of dollars in tax revenue received by state and local governments.

I believe that unless livestock are deleted from the LAL provisions, many legitimate farm operations will be damaged and much needed capital investment will not be available for the breeding industry.

For these reasons, I strongly urge you as Chairman (as a member) of the Ways and Means Committee to reconsider the proposed farm loss provisions.

Sincerely,

by *Royal Serenade—Crown Dancer by *Half Crown

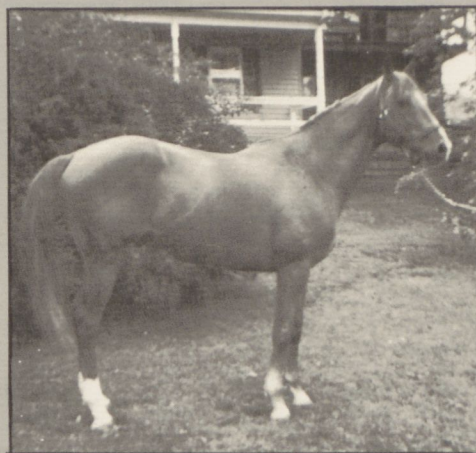

This beautifully conformed stallion by *ROYAL SERENADE handily won his first race as a two-year-old. Subsequently injured and after relatively few races, he was retired. In his first season at stud (1975) 100% of his mares were reported in foal.

*ROYAL SERENADE's offspring have produced some of the finest horses in the country, including CRAFTY KHALE, WITHIN HAIL, SUPER SALLY, GULLS CRY, and many others. GAY SERENADE, also sired by *ROYAL SERENADE, delivered a colt that sold at auction in August 1975 for $150,000.

Splat! Goes The Rider

By John Shropshire
Drawings by Nancy Boyce

One gets the impression that horses' ability to remove riders has been developed to a science. Not only do they become adept at the job, but with malice aforethought they manage to execute the maneuver at the most inconvenient time.

Riders are rarely dumped when they are by themselves on soft ground. It's usually in front of as many people as possible; over muddy, sloppy going; on hard frozen ground; going down a gravel hill or miles from home, so there is a long walk back, following a horse that just manages to stay out of reach until you arrive at the stable door.

The techniques for ridding themselves of the rider's burden are many and varied. Some of the more common are:

Wipe Off

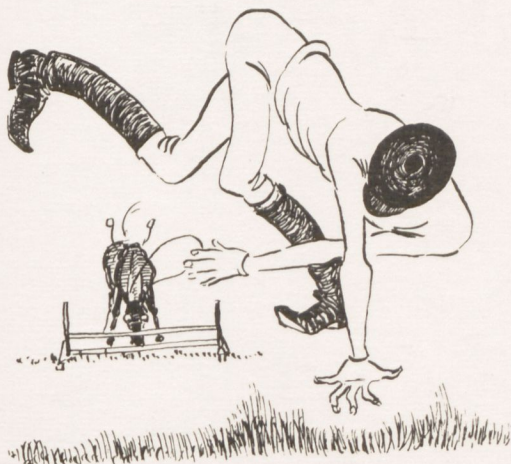

The "WIPE OFF" or "WALK CLOSE TO THE BARBED WIRE FENCE ROUTINE" is often worked on beginners. It doesn't require much effort and is most effective. Trying to get away, the rider does the most obvious — pulling the horse's head from the fence or wall. This is just what he wanted. Now he can execute a shoulder out maneuver, bending his body away from the fence so the rider's knee and/or new boot is alarmingly close to the barbs. With the footwork of a well-schooled dressage horse, he stays in close to the fence until the mounted one pulls up his leg, gets off balance and eventually slides off.

Stopping To Graze

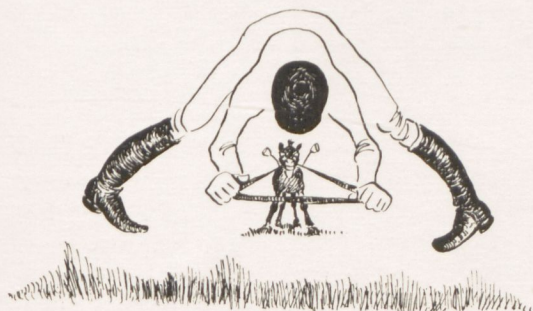

The "STOPPING TO GRAZE PRANK" is another subtle way of dislodging the novice. In a series of jack-like motions Hayburner lowers his head to the ground ignoring fruitless efforts to pull it back up. Eventually, he gets his passenger on a short rein, off balance and leaning over his neck. Then, slowly but surely, the rider slides down the neck, over the head. If the horse is lucky, off comes the bridle leaving him free to stay out of reach until fun time is all used up.

It's Higher Than I Thought

The "IT'S HIGHER THAN I THOUGHT CAPRICE" obviously requires a fence — even a small one will do. After a hearty approach, the last leap or takeoff winds up in a short jump with all four feet rooted to the same side from which the approach was made. Missile fashion, the rider launches up the horse's neck and with luck clears the top bar. Without luck, he may land smack in the middle of the bar, smashing it to smithereens and absorbing a quantity of splinters, which tend to take the mind off the fall.

Quick Stop

The "QUICK STOP CAPER" can be done at any speed by a clever horse. He waits until his burden is relaxed and enjoying the scenery, then applies all four feet in a sudden stop that would do credit to a finely adjusted set of disc brakes. Inertia being what it is, and the rider being where he is, there is little doubt of the outcome, which is represented in the following formula: $\frac{S \times P + L}{A \times T}$ = severity of impact. The letters represent: S — speed of the horse; P — the person's weight; L — length of slide; A — angle of fall and T — texture of the ground. The formula can be remembered by the code word, SPLAT!

Shy, Spook Or Dodge

The "SHY, SPOOK or DODGE FROLIC" is as ancient as the old grey mare, but gets new customers every day. When effectively executed, it's guaranteed to leave the unwary rider grappling with nothing but thin air. It usually occurs when Dobbin has seen an imaginary monster or something unusual like a candy bar wrapper, cat or dog.

There are all sorts of variations on the "remove the rider" technique, from blowing up to produce a loose saddle to lying down in a stream. The results are nearly always the same — a disheveled, dismounted equestrian and a happy, rider-less horse.

Equines aren't known for their mental alacrity; in short, they aren't supposed to be too brainy. But don't let that fool you — they can dream up more ways of unseating a rider than there are oats in a bin. □

Susan Henry, A Talented Artist

Framed painting is of two horses owned by Geri Theile. It was Mrs. Theile who "discovered" Miss Henry.

The great 3-year-old filly Ruffian as seen by Miss Henry.

We are pleased to show in this issue horse paintings executed by 25-year-old Susan Henry, an honor graduate of the Maryland Institute of Art.

Miss Henry graduated first in the class of 1971, then moved to England where she attended Porlock Vale Riding School, eventually receiving a British Horse Society Assistant Instructor's Certificate.

Deeply involved in equitation, Susan rides at least two horses (which she owns) every day while caring for nine others (which she does not own). She is a teacher in the commercial art department of Luzerne Community College and lives in nearby Hazelton, Pa.

She was accepted into the Society of Animal Artists last year and was exhibited in its spring show at Grand Central Art Gallery in New York.

Miss Henry studies horsemanship under Capt. E. E. Geissler and is competing in second and third level dressage.

The work performed by Susan was called to the attention of this magazine by Geri Thiele, New Oxford, Pa. Mrs. Thiele had "discovered" the young artist while perusing an art studio in Gettysburg.

Miss Henry says that 75 per cent of her paintings are horse-oriented "with the rest being wildlife, dogs, cats — that sort of thing."

Asked if she has studied horse anatomy, Miss Henry replied: "No. But I study veterinary journals, and I go on a lot of horse calls with a veterinarian that I'm dating."

Susan has two sisters who are "scared to death of horses" and no brothers. She began drawing horses when she was 5 years old, using a neighbor's pony ("a little Welsh named Lucky") as her model. She says that during most of her days in school she wiled away her time by doodling with horse drawings instead of listening to the teachers.

Her favorite subject is now the Thoroughbred, because "they look more elegant." □

My First Foxhunt

By Kevin Logan

Twelve-year-old Kevin Logan is an eighth grade student at Cherry Hill Middle School near Elkton. He became interested in foxhunting through friends who were members of Miss Patricia duPont's hunt club.

On Saturday morning I got up before daylight. After breakfast I brought in my horse and put him in his stall.

Today was the day of my first foxhunt.

Soon the place was buzzing with activity — people in automobiles, horses whinnying, dogs barking. All around people were busy. And, for the first time, I was one of them.

I picked up my saddle and bridle and walked over to my horse. I gave him a cube of sugar and put on the saddle. I took off his halter and put on his bridle.

The saddle is a typical English jumping saddle made of leather. The bridle matches the saddle. I let my horse out of the barn and mounted. Soon I was walking toward the kennels.

The kennels are about half a mile down the road. Kyle Crouse was already there, as usual, in the pickup. He takes care of the hounds.

When I got there, two people had already arrived. That meant that there were twelve others still coming. When they got there, the hounds were turned loose.

We crossed the road and went into a field, and then down a trail. Foxhunting is a fun sport.

Old Keel sounded the call. The other hounds followed. Soon we were at a fast canter through a field. The riding was hard when we entered thick brush. So far the fox was heading up alongside a stream. All of a sudden we lost the trail. Riders galloped through the stream. The fox got out and ran again. The big thing was that we did not know where he got out.

The search went on. Then once again Old Keel sounded through the brush. Again we crossed the stream and headed back into the brush.

At the top of a hill we stopped. We could see the fox loping through a field. We waited, for we knew he would probably cross, then follow the hollow. All we had to do was wait until the hounds came back and circle around.

As unpredictable as ever, the fox turned out of the hollow and ran across a wide open field. I could see across it for half a mile.

The hounds started across the field, and we took off after them.

Just then Old Keel sounded again. Only this time it was a baffled call. At that moment I knew the hunt was over — the fox had holed up.

Hounds were called off and we started home. When all the hounds were in the kennels safely, we went back to the farm.

When we got there, I led my horse into the barn, unsaddled him, and walked the sweat off. Then I gave him a sugar cube. I took him to his stall, gave him oats and water. I put his blanket on and left.

I was tired. But I felt good. My first foxhunt had been fun. □

An Old

I remember cool mornings, mist rising — drawn up by the warm sun.

I'm left behind now. My legs are sore and stiff. But it wasn't always so.

I remember shaking sleep out of my eyes and ears, stretching and pulling my muscles loose. A few kicks, a sniff at the grass. The horn.

I was the first to move off and all followed me. They looked to me for help. But I took no notice. There was a job to do. Foxes to find.

"Come, puppies, come," he called then. I needed no urging. Fields drew me on. Sweet scents caressed my nose. I cast, here, there. In long strides I struck out for the corn field.

The pack fell in behind, waiting, listening. My confidence billowed up inside me. It filled my lungs and throat. I was sure — never deceitful, never a liar. That's how I lived my life. I only spoke when I had something to say.

Now, it's "Stay, Captain," he says. "Stay" to me!

I was the one who waited for the dawn, twitching and quivering, who loved the earth-smell of fox more than my life. These aching bones are my proof.

I ran and left all others behind. Let them catch me if they could. Darkness fell and the horn blew.

I hear a horn now — soft, far off.

It's not for me.

But, oh, how I wish it were.

Marylanders Surprise At Nat'l Rally

by Sally O'Connor

The epitome of competition in the world of Pony Club is the annual National Rally. In recent years the Maryland region has been unable to mount a real threat. This year, however, Maryland sent both a regional team and a club team to the 21st National Rally, a five-phase contest bringing together some of the best young riders in the country. At the B level it is a team effort while the A riders compete as individuals.

One week prior to the date of the competition the regional team, made up of individual B riders who had competed successfully at the regional rally, took their horses to Sandy Spring, Md., home of the Redland Hunt Pony Club, the winning club team, for intensive instruction on the mounted and unmounted phases. Nancy Ann Sayre and Cindy Morrison from the Redfield Pony Club, Janice Sosnowski and Cathy Dibben from the Annapolis Pony Club and Melissa Kane from Elkridge-Harford stayed with the Redland team members — Dyanne Caprio, Donna Preston, Meg Hoffman, Terry Hatzes and Brian O'Connor. Each day they schooled their horses on the flat, over fences, and cross-country, and spent hours getting each piece of tack into tip-top condition. Skull sessions kept them up late each night. Pat Maykuth, an energetic pony club graduate A who was one of their coaches, insisted on getting them up early each morning to jog three or more miles. "If we don't die first," groaned the kids, "we'll be in great shape by rally time."

It was a 13-hour drive to Lake Placid, N.Y., site of the National competition. The teams decided to drive up overnight so the horses would not suffer unduly from the heat and would have sufficient time to settle in.

A convoy of one horse van, two cars with trailers and four attendant cars set out on Sunday, July 27. Despite the best of intentions, vehicles soon got separated. After a long night's drive, not knowing whether everyone else was still on the road, three different groups finally wound up at Lake Placid.

The rally grounds were chaotic, to say the least. A violent thunderstorm the previous evening had inundated the entire stabling area and temporary stalls were three or four inches under water. The regional team had to walk their horses around for two hours because their stalls had not yet been erected. Redland team members set to work with shovels and rakes to construct a system of drains and dikes to hold off the water. Mrs. Lily Bedford, one of the stable management judges, walked by and said casually, "It certainly brings out the beaver in the kids. Perhaps we should lend them to the Dutch in flood time!" After the horses were finally stabled, exhausted teams and drivers collapsed into bed for a few hours' sleep.

Returning to the stables, it was found that one of Redland's horses had gotten into an argument with the horse in an adjoining stall, kicked out and caught his ankle between the boards, wrenching it badly. He was dead lame. The vet came and administered a shot but it was doubtful whether the horse would be fit for competition. With four riders on each team the top three scores are counted in the placings; to lose one horse would seriously handicap the team's chances. Redland faced the news calmly, determined to do their best anyway.

Competition began in earnest on Tuesday morning. Teams from all over the country were arriving. Some came from as far away as Texas, having spent three days and nights on the road. One team pulled in from a nonstop drive from Iowa, and three Canadian teams appeared from over the border. In all there were 23 A riders, 12 club teams and 18 regional teams for a grand total of 173 competitors, making this the largest National Rally to date.

The first phase of a rally is the setting up of stables and tack rooms. Stable management judges watch each move carefully and inspect setups for practicality and safety. Red-land was elated to find out that it had lost no points at all the first day, while the regional team lost only two. After the written test on Tuesday night, both teams were in second place.

Wednesday, all riders underwent a formal inspection. The turnout of horse and rider was given close scrutiny by one of the stable management judges. Patricia Mansmann, chief judge, explained to the kids what she was looking for: "We expect excellence," she remarked. "We want to see if your idea of excellence is the same as ours!"

After inspection, riders went through their dressage rides. The injured horse was given the go-ahead by the vet and Redland picked up more points. Placing second overall in the dressage, they pulled up close to the leading club team. Maryland regional did not fare as well in the dressage, but their combined scores put them in contention also. One of the other teams, whose club had been prominent in national rallies for the past few years, said, "You Redland kids are doing well. We'd never even heard of you before!"

The cross-country course consisted of a 3-mile roads and tracks phase which wound up and down one of the hills surrounding the show grounds, followed by a big, honest galloping course of 2½ miles. The fences were solid and well built, offering a chance for a bold horse to do his thing. There were not many difficult problems and it looked big but inviting. Of eight Maryland riders six came in with no faults at all, one was eliminated and one got around with several refusals. The two horses that had difficulty were a borrowed horse who had never competed at this level and a substitute who had never jumped a B level course in her life.

These scores kept both teams well in contention. In fact Redland wound up the day just three points out of first place. The regional team had had some difficulty — poor judgement in galloping a very hot horse had set them back a costly 20 points. Otherwise they would have had a good lead at this stage. "Never mind," said a team member. "We've shown that we're as good as the rest of them. We've put Maryland on the map as far as national competition goes."

The final day started with a parade of teams at 7:30 a.m.! "Who's going to watch a parade at 7:30 a.m.?" grumbled the competitors. Parents, friends, relations and coaches — that's who. Maryland had a strong contingent of supporters rooting loudly for the two teams. "We may not win, but we gave them a run for their money," said one of the parents.

The Redland team, only three points out of first place, was faced with a difficult task. One of their horses had pulled out lame after cross-country; another had been suspect since the injury on Monday. With only three horses jumping and one of them shaky, they knew that their chances were slim. Unfortunately two riders had one rail down each and the third horse refused out. They dropped into fifth place.

Instead of being downhearted, Redland stayed in the grandstand to cheer on their fellow Marylanders on the regional team, who pulled themselves together, produced three clean rounds out of four and wound up in sixth place overall.

"They'd better watch out for us next year," said the kids. "Maryland has arrived. Anyway we had a fantastically good time and met some great new friends." That about summed it up for everyone. After all, that's what pony club is all about — the competition and the friendship are the important things.

Richard Stone Reeves / Patrick Robinson

THIS SPECTACULAR ART BOOK WILL BE AUTOGRAPHED JUST FOR YOU...IF YOU AGREE TO EXAMINE IT FOR 30 DAYS FREE!

And if you keep your Numbered First Edition at a 33% prepublication discount, your continuing enjoyment of it is assured by a one-year repurchase guarantee.

FACT: Almost every champion racehorse today is the descendant of one of five great foundation stallions, Man o' War, Hyperion, Ribot, Native Dancer or Nearco.

FACT: Richard Stone Reeves is the finest painter of thoroughbreds alive. Ask Penny Tweedy, Secretariat's owner, or Lester Piggott, England's most famous jockey.

FACT: Patrick Robinson is one of the most knowledgeable writers about horses in the English language. Ask anyone who followed his columns in the London Daily Express.

FACT: Put these three facts into a huge, meticulously produced volume and the result is a publishing event that will be a sensation on both sides of the Atlantic.

CLASSIC LINES (with an introduction by The 18th Earl of Derby), is not just a history of great bloodlines, nor an illustrated racing book, nor a records book, although it is indeed all of these. But more importantly, it is an attempt to put the excitement, the fascination, the opulence of this glorious sport between two covers. This 12-by-16-inch volume contains over 100 paintings, drawings and sketches, over 58,000 words and all the drama and color of the Sport of Kings.

Among the 64 full-color paintings of the Classic winners are five especially commissioned originals by Mr. Reeves. Each of these stallions has an entire chapter, illustrating his most famous descendants and capturing the essence of the bloodline. Most of Mr. Reeves' paintings have never before been seen, for they are done only by commission and hang in the most influential homes on four continents. Significantly, none of his paintings has ever been sold, or resold, at public auction.

In his many months of research for the book, Patrick Robinson interviewed the people who breed, buy, sell, train and ride the champions. In most cases, their insights and opinions have never seen type before.

When open, CLASSIC LINES measures nearly a full yard across and a foot high. Over 380 square inches! And world-famous art reproduction expert, Harry Lerner, supervised the entire production even down to the binding of library buckram and genuine, natural cowhide leather.

If you order your Autographed Numbered First Edition before December 31, 1975, you'll enjoy a generous 33% reduction on its $75.00 retail price. You pay only $50.00... after a 30-day examination convinces you you want the book permanently.

Bus's Tackroom

By Geraldine T. Garrett

Bus Taylor trained Thoroughbreds on the Delaware-Maryland circuit until his death in 1959. Often he passed the time in his tackroom by telling stories of backstretch life. Here he talks of the horseman's constant headache, the help problem, and of one hired man's unique solution.

Willie Malone was his given name, but everybody called him Skink. He worked for Walter Carroll for years. Periodically he and Walt disagreed over the amount or timing of Skink's alcohol consumption. Walt was the most easy-going man on the track, but Skink could rile him up in a second with a chance remark. And it worked both ways. Skink usually announced Walt's arrival with, "Heah come ole' Bellyache."

Once after an especially bad day at the races, Walt brought some horses back to our farm to freshen them up. While the van was being unloaded, I noticed that Skink was unsteady on his feet. Finally when he stumbled under a horse, Walt grabbed the shank and said, "Just get out of the way. A useless drunk irritates me!"

"You irrigates me, too!" Skink retorted, smiling all the while. He was so blissfully drunk that only the next day's hangover would put him in touch with an irate boss or hard work or sore horses.

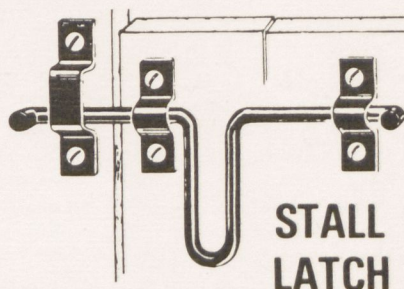

When the outfit moved back to the track, Skink pressed his luck too far, and Walt surprised everybody by firing him. For a couple of weeks Walt pretended nothing was wrong, but you could tell he missed Skink. In the meantime he had hired another man who was getting on his nerves worse because he did everything right.

Then one morning Walt went out to the barn to find Skink feeding the stock. "What are you doing here?" Walt demanded.

"Just come back from my vacation," Skink answered.

"Your what? I don't believe . . . Well, where's my new man?"

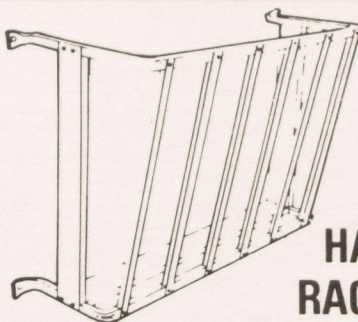

"I let him go," Skink explained. "Didn't amount to nuthin' nohow." □

Note: Prior to 1964 sale was held in tent. Prior to 1969 horses charged-back to consignors were listed as sold; from 1969 on, only horses actually sold are so listed. In 1975, an open session was added to the two selected sessions. Because the sessions were conducted under different standards of selectivity, separate statistics are maintained.

Indoor Equine Swimming Pool Responsible For Nine Success Stories

At George Lewis's Little Acorn Farm, site of Maryland's newest indoor equine swimming facility, 'most all of Mr. Lewis's swimmers have been horses which, for one reason or another, were too unsound to gallop. So when Mr. Lewis notes that nine of his swimmers have come back to win races this year, he has justification in believing that it was the swimming which made the difference. 'Five of the nine,' he adds, 'won right out of the pool. The other four had some race track training after being here to swim.'

Four of the five horses which won races 'right out of the pool' were Boniface runners. They were Engaged, Leafwood, Stern and Zesty. The fifth horse was Bold Believer, trained and owned by Bernard Klein."

(The Maryland Horse, Sept., 1975)

Facilities at Little Acorn include heated swimming pool, spacious indoor drying room, roomy well-ventilated stalls, turn-out paddocks, van service, track available, excellent veterinarian and farrier service, nearby diagnostic and surgical facilities, proximity to major tracks.

Show, 3-Phase News Items

Olympic Tryouts Planned

William Steinkraus, president of the United States Equestrian Team, has announced plans for selection and training of the 1976 Montreal Olympic Dressage, Three-Day and Jumping teams.

Candidates for all three teams are requested to advise the USET by November 30, 1975, of their candidacy. Riders must be 18 or over, U. S. citizens and amateurs.

Jumping team selection trials have not been determined as yet. When show dates and conditions have been finalized, a plan for training and participation in selected events will be published. The Olympic Individual Jumping event is scheduled for July 27 at Bromont, Quebec. The Prize of Nations will be on the closing day, August 1, in Montreal.

Dressage team candidates will be able to attend two training sessions at Gladstone and one on the west coast between February and April. Riders will be observed at selected dressage shows in May and June. A selection trial will be held at Gladstone, New Jersey, in June and a short list selected from the trials will then train at Gladstone and ship to Bromont in time for the July 28, 29 and 30 Grand Prix Dressage events.

Training sessions will be held at Hamilton, Massachusetts, in February and March for as many Three-Day team candidates as can be accommodated. Prior performances will be used as a basis for selection to attend training sessions. Three selection horse trials will be utilized to develop a short list of riders. Separate divisions will be organized for candidates. Tentative plans are for an open intermediate one-day event April 17 or 18, an advanced level one-day event around May 15 and a two-day event at advanced level June 12 and 13. Following the trials the selected short list riders will assemble at Hamilton, Mass., for training and shipment to Bromont for the July 22, 23, 24, and 25 Olympic Three-Day Event.

Coming down from Canada for the competitions will be: Ian Millar, Terry Liebel, Jim Day and Frank Celinger, with Doug Hood as the chef d'equipe.

The French coach noted in his letter of acceptance that though his riders might not be well known to American show jumping enthusiasts, they "are a young and combative team."

The United States Equestrian Team President, Bill Steinkraus, has also announced the identity of the U.S. riders.

Named as captain of the Washington team is Neal Shapiro, 30, of Glen Head, New York. Other members of the team are Conrad Homfeld, 23, of Houston, Texas; Rodney Jenkins, 30, of Orange, Virginia; Michele McEvoy, 21, of Summit, New Jersey, and reserve rider Melanie Smith, 25, of Germantown, Tennessee. Rodney Jenkins as a professional is nominated to the team by the American Horse Shows Association.

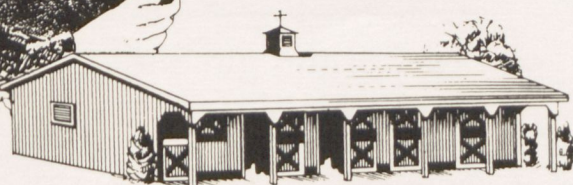

For the later New York show at Madison Square Garden (Nov. 4-11), the riders will be Buddy Brown, 19, of South Salem, New York; Joe Fargis, 27, of Vienna, Virginia; Rodney Jenkins, 30, of Orange, Virginia; Michael Matz, 24, of Shillington, Pennsylvania, and Dennis Murphy, 30, of Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Horse Racing Seminars

Five weekly evening seminars covering all aspects of the racing and breeding industries will be held during November and December under the auspices of the University of Maryland's Cooperative Extension Service.

The programs will be held at the Holiday Inn in Jessup with Dr. Robert Lawrence again serving as coordinator. Dr. Lawrence began the seminars last fall and was delighted with the response of those who attended.

Dates chosen are November 4, 11, 18, 25 and December 2. Each program will begin at 7:30. Deadline for registration is October 24. The enrollment fee is $30.

Among the speakers will be Chick Lang, Jack Mobberley, John Tammaro, L. Clay Camp, Dr. Jim McCall, John Merryman, Dr. Jim Stewart, Dr. Tom Bowman, Dr. Rich Dillon and Snowden Carter.

Questions to be answered are: Should you buy or breed your own horses; where should you buy them; what will you be obligated to pay; what should you look for in a race horse or broodmare; how do you find a stallion; how do you find a trainer; what will training cost; where should you race?

Art Show

A salute to Laurel's Washington International is the theme of a fall show of paintings and drawings by George Warren Booth.

Two exhibitions are planned, one in the Turf Club at Laurel from October 20 to October 28. The other show will be held at the Venable-Neslage Galleries, 1742 Connecticut Avenue, N.W., from October 23 through November 15.

Mr. Booth is the winner of more than 35 major art and design awards for his work as an illustrator, designer and art director.

We are extending a cordial invitation to all those interested in acquiring a truly lovely small estate in a select location to come and see "Whiffletree Manor". In the Warrenton Hunt country, a few miles south of Warrenton, property on 67 acres includes uniquely charming old house, modernized and intriguingly decorated, swimming pool and bath house, extensive stabling and guest cottage. Just now being offered for $280,000.

Lecture XII: Transportation Techniques

By J. William Boniface

For the last 17 years I've been beating a living out of the horse business and about every phase of it requires a fellow to haul them around so I guess that is why they have called on me.

Transporting horses can probably be translated to the term "common sense" because in reality that is the long and short of it. However, I've prepared this presentation and the accompanying slides in hopes that you will not make some of the mistakes that I have. The object, of course, is to get the animal where you want him.

That brings to mind a story that my grandfather used to love to tell. When he was a boy in England his father sent him down to the sale to sell this horse. Rather than lead the horse and walk beside him he decided to ride him. Going down the hard-surfaced road a little too fast, the horse went lame in the left leg. So, I said, "What did you do?" And he said, "Well, I knew that my father would raise hell with me if I came back with a lame horse to sell, so I got off, went into the woods and got a stout stick and hit him on the other leg so he was about the same on both sides."

You would be surprised at the things, the little things, that are forgotten or overlooked on various special horses. I was just reading in the Blood-Horse magazine the other day about a horse that was syndicated for a lot of money. I was flying a horse to Nebraska on the same plane with this particular animal. On the runway while loading, the other horse acted up a little bit and the handler snatched down on him. The halter broke and there he was out in the middle of the runway with no halter on. He was running against me the next day for $50,000. I wanted to let him go but I decided that I would help them catch him and we did. When we got the halter and looked at it, it was completely rotted through the stitches on one side. This is one point of interest. If you are going to ship, always look at your equipment.

Another thing to consider is timing your trip to avoid congestion. A horse will handle himself a lot quieter in the van when you are going at a moderate rate than when you are starting and stopping. For example, if you are going down to Bowie from here, you don't want to hit the harbor tunnel during rush hour traffic. Unless you have a specific time that you must go you can often avoid this. You can make what would be a long trip into a shorter one with just a little thought about where you are going and what time the rush traffic will occur. Notify the place where you are going of your estimated time of arrival. I operate a breeding farm and there is nothing more aggravating than a mare coming in on a van in the middle of the night when no one knew she was coming. If you expect people on the other end to cooperate with you then you have to cooperate with them. Let them know when you want to come. Everybody expects a lady to be an hour late, but if it changes much more than that, let them know.

Coordinate your fuel schedule, which now is a big problem. Most larger vans have a couple of tanks and you can pretty well calculate how far you can go and where you are going to be able to get your fuel. I've seen many a van with two tanks leave with only one tank filled.

I like travel by plane very much. If any of you have sat in the back of a van with a horse while you traveled down the road you've seen its stomach going up and down — bounce, bounce, bounce. When they arrive at the place after a long trip, they're tucked up, just like they've run a race. With the airplane you don't get this, because it's one smooth glide. There is a lot more travel by plane now with the more valuable horses. I like it but you lose a lot of the advantage if you don't coordinate the fueling of the plane and the time of the plane's takeoff. Most tracks are near the airport you're leaving from. A simple telephone call will save you a lot of trouble. It doesn't do you any good to get to the airport and sit there for a couple of hours. Also check the loading time on the plane. In most planes the ceiling is very close to the horse's head and the temperature is very hot in the summer. If you have to sit still on the ground for very long your horse is going to break out in a sweat.

Once you have prepared your time schedule, you have to prepare your horse. Anytime that I am shipping a horse over six to eight hours I like to oil him. Oil him with a stomach tube. I like to give him antibiotics. I like to draw him a little, but I'm not much for tranquilizers. I believe that the greatest tranquilization is preoccupation. So I draw a horse a little before he ships. I get him a little hungry and I put up a nice rack of fresh hay that he is going to want to go for. We've got a big edge on horses because we can think and they can't. If you can distract their attention during the trip, loading, or any other time — make them think about something else, they'll forget worrying about the close confining quarters.

At a lot of race tracks now you have to have a health certificate. You have to have a certificate of vaccination for going interstate. It doesn't do you any good to get up to Liberty Bell and they keep you there at the gate until you can find a vet to give you a certificate.

Have a water bucket if you are going a distance. It doesn't do any good to raise hell with the handler for not watering the horse if he didn't have a bucket. That's your job.

Have a good halter, as I mentioned earlier. I don't like nylon halters. When you get to the real bad boys, when that horse pulls hard enough to break a leather halter, I want him to break it, because something is going to get broken, and if it's a nylon halter, it just won't give. You want to have a chain shank rather than a rope shank, so if you want to put it over the nose and use a little pressure, you've got it there.

Check his temperature. You can bet on one thing, if a horse is sick when he starts, he is really going to be sick when he gets there. I like to use bandages to protect the legs, all four of them. Use sheet cotton, preferably at least five sheets. I am sure all of you know how to apply it. Put your cotton on, then your other bandage. You may want to pull bell boots on the front feet of the horse. They just slide over the hoof and will stop the horse from grabbing his quarter. A lot of people don't think about a tail bandage. But I have seen horses on a long shipment that will rub their tails raw. They'll infect their tail and wind up with a low-grade infection. So if you have a particular horse that has this habit you might want to use a tail bandage, especially on a horse that does it in the stall. Some horses will take one hind leg and put it on top of the other. Caulking boots for the hind feet may be needed on these horses. These boots are leather with a metal front covering. Any of you who have tried to heal wounds in this place know how hard they are to heal, so the boots are good to prevent injuries to begin with. I like head guards on a horse that is inclined to throw his head. I think they are compulsory on an airplane, since their structure is a lot more shallow. They will give a horse a lot of protection. They are felt-lined, with leather going over the top of his ears and a strap to the halter.

I said I don't like tranquilizers. The reason I don't like them is I've worked around horses doing every different thing with them that you can. I feel that I know how a horse is going to react when I do something. When I shank down on him he is going to go back. If I push on him from the right side he is going that direction. When a horse is tranquilized he doesn't always react the way you think he will. If you do use tranquilizers, give them time to work, usually about 20 minutes. Make sure you don't hit him with the needle and then go to put him on the van immediately, because you are defeating the purpose. Never use tranquilizers after the horse has already thrown a fit. Usually they will work in reverse at that point. As a matter of fact I saw that happen once. I helped unload a horse out of an airplane in Delaware. It was a valuable yearling. We just about took her out of there in pieces. It was pathetic. She had been given a tranquilizer after she had already started a fit.

Now we've got the horse and ourselves ready, and we are ready to load him. Everybody knows it is easier to load a horse off a chute than it is off the ground. You should build your chute just a little lower than the height of your van doors. Then you can just open your doors right there and drop your short chute. It works out nicely. A simple chute with oak boards and locust posts works fine. A front of cinder blocks is simple and effective. One of the mistakes most often made on a chute using cinder blocks is to not protect them. You should put a long beam in front because the van drivers are going to hit them — you can count on that. And if you've got a beam bolted in there it will keep the vans from breaking your blocks out.

The ideal chute is L-shaped. You get your horse up there before he knows where he is going. He goes up the chute and then turns and he is headed straight for the door. There is nowhere else he can go. He doesn't balk because he hasn't seen the truck. He was just walking up to a fence.

We've got our perfect chute — now we'll load the horse. Some horses come up to the van and balk. I don't know why they do that, but they do. When I get to a farm to pick up a new horse, I like to have the man who has handled him on his head. That yearling's been following that man and he has got a better shot at loading him than you have. So let the man who knows him stay on his head. You do what you can from the other end. Very often people hesitate and lose their best chance on that first step. A lot of green horses have never been loaded but when they're with a familiar man they'll walk up there and go right on. Don't let them stop and look at it. Then they never go that next step. If he's walking along and he's going right in there, you let him go on in. If he stops, you lift one foot up, then put pressure on the other; just keep inching him in there, gently prying him, ever so gently. Maybe hold a bucket of feed in front of him. Get two men to hook hands behind him. Make sure the fellow holding your hand is not going to let go, because the big advantage here is to stay in tight to the horse. People who are a little timid try to hold a horse and stay away from it at the same time. That is the worst thing you can do. If you are right next to him and he kicks, he is going to push you away. If he's got three or four feet before he gets to you, he'll hurt you.

I like to ship a horse in a double stall. If I've got a van and just one horse to go, I'll make a double stall behind the driver. Why behind the driver? That's the high side of the road. The part of the road that's closest to the yellow line is the least bumpy. On the right side close to the edge of the road, the horse is going to get a little rougher trip. I like the horse to have to stand on his own. I don't want him to start lying against the side of the van. Once he starts lying he gets more and more rambunctious and thrashes his legs around more and more. Make him feel for his footing, even in a box stall for young weanlings. What I'm trying to say is if a horse seems a little tight, try to give him more room. In loading, I like to keep a distance between studs and fillies. This reminds me of a story about a fellow who was hauling horses at one time and had a stud. It just so happened that he had only the one truck and it was a small one. He had the stud and a mare in there and the stud was getting rather excited so the farmer said, "We'll, we've got to take his mind off this." He had a big jar of Vicks in his box, so he took the Vicks and rammed it up the stud's nose. He stopped smelling that mare, quieted down and everything was fine. Anyhow, watch your placing in the van. Place a gelding between a filly and colt if you have to haul them together.

Back to loading — for prodding a horse I prefer a broom to a rake or other tool, not for hitting but for just tickling around the hocks.

This irritates the horse and when he picks up that leg he just might set it down a little further forward. Once a horse is loaded, move him. Don't stand around to relax and talk about the weather, stop for a drink or have a cup of coffee. That is the worst thing to do. Give him something else to think about. When he is standing still, he is going to think about getting into trouble. You start some movement, bumps and turns and he is going to think about that. Same thing along the road — I hate to see a driver pull over and get something to eat. The driver has to go to the bathroom, or get a cup of coffee or this or that. Now I'm talking about a six to eight hour run. The driver should take care of all those things before he loads up and leaves. The less stop time you have, the better. You want to have some kind of communication between the driver and the attendant. Most vans have a buzzer. If you don't have a buzzer, leave the window open.

If you break down along the road a lot of people think that policemen are out there to harass you, but I've gotten quite a lot of help from them at different times. One thing that is important during a breakdown is not to pull your chute and unload your horse and then load it in another van. Pull the other van alongside and load directly using your short chute. Keep away from draughts. You've usually got plenty of different windows — don't use the one right next to the horse. You should also be aware of the climate. If you ship a horse down to Florida in the winter, clip him, so he is not bothered by a long winter haircoat. Same thing in reverse if you are coming North, keep a blanket ready for him when you reach a colder area.

"A Complete Experience For The Thoroughbred Racehorse"

Now you have reached your destination, but the job is not over. Perhaps everything has not worked according to Hoyle and the horse is hot. Don't give up right then. If you've done a good job that far you want to follow it up. Give the horse a few turns around the barn and water him off. Maybe get a little straw and rub him off. Don't just set him in there and put a big feed tub in either. Let him sit for awhile, making sure he is not fed right away.

If all the loading procedures I mentioned above don't work, don't give up. It becomes a matter of survival of the fittest. And that theory of waiting until the next day and taking another try at it just doesn't work. That second round, after the horse has won the first one, is tough. He will come out stronger than he did the first time.

I'd like to talk just a little bit about trailers. Trailers are good. They give you a big advantage because by backing directly into an aisleway you can load horses in the barn. This eliminates the horse's options of places to go. When you go in a trailer, if you have a permanent breastplate in front of the horse, don't try to duck under it until the tailgate is closed. So many people walk onto the trailer and when they go to duck under the breastplate the horse backs off the trailer. Hold him there until whoever is helping you gets the tailgate up. When unloading off the trailer, the mistake I have seen many people make is lowering the tailgate before untying the horse. When the tailgate drops, if the horse is used to traveling in a trailer, he is going to start out, still tied in front. Then you have another broken halter or possibly worse. So, untie the horse in front and hold him, have someone undo the snap in back, then lower the tailgate.

I hope I have given you some useful things to think about when you need to move your next horse. □

30 Years Ago This Month
The Maryland Horse Reported...

► Harry A. Parr III was honored by the New York Turf Writers Association as the man who had done the most for racing during the past year. Mr. Parr was president of Pimlico, treasurer of Timonium and president of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations.

► D. Sterett Gittings noted that the earliest written reference to foxhunting in Maryland was found in a 1785 newspaper. The advertisement read: "The Baltimore Hunt: A Huntsman wanted — Proposals to be sent to Grant's Tavern (The Fountain Inn). Applicants must be well acquainted with the training and hunting of dogs." Mr. Gittings further stated that in 1799 another Baltimore newspaper ran this advertisement: "The Baltimore Hunt desires Red and Gray Foxes. Will pay $6 for a Red and $4 for a Gray. Also wants small hounds."

► Frank Stricklin retired the Hampstead Rotary Club trophy at the Hampstead Hunt Club show, winning it for the third time astride his Fox Hill. Judges for the show were Mrs. Henry Obre and Danny Shea.

► Champion at the Parole Hunt Club show was Don Bradley's High Glow, ridden by Susanne Ladd. The reserve ribbon went to Suitland Stable's Red Wings, ridden by Ann Taylor.

Successful public trainer Frank Bonsal saddled winners of both divisions of Laurel's 1945 Capital Handicap, scoring with New Moon and The Doge.

► Laurel opened on September 10 and feature attraction was the Capital Handicap which was split into two divisions. Trainer Frank A. Bonsal saddled the winners of both divisions, sending out Harry Straus's New Moon in the first division and Pentagon Stable's The Doge in the second.

► Shown on the cover was Henry L. Straus's New Moon, winner of the Aqueduct and Capital Handicaps. New Moon, a son of Discovery, was trained by Frank A. Bonsal. Mr. Straus, vice-president of the American Totalisator Company, was to die in 1949 when his airplane crashed returning to Maryland from New York.

► In a full page advertisement, C. E. Tuttle solicited entries for the first running of the Blockade Memorial Cup to be run at his estate in Garrison on November 2. Under sanction of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association, the race was to be three miles over timber. Entries were to be sent to Mr. Tuttle's son-in-law, J. Fred Colwill. The race was designed to honor Blockade, the great three-time (1938-39-40) winner of the Maryland Hunt Cup who was killed when he fell in the 1942 running of the Virginia Gold Cup. Blockade had been owned by Mrs. E. Read Beard and trained by Janon Fisher, Jr., when winning the three renewals of the Maryland Hunt Cup. Mr. Tuttle purchased the horse in 1941. Mr. Colwill was Blockade's rider in all three Maryland Hunt Cup triumphs and was also aboard when the gelding broke his neck in the Virginia race.

► Howard Bruce, distinguished Maryland foxhunter and horse breeder, was one of four civilians to be awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by President Harry S. Truman. Mr. Bruce had been Director of Materiel during World War II and was praised by General Brehon B. Somervell as "one of the great architects of America's war machine." Mr. Bruce was former MFH of the Elkridge and was also the owner of America's great steeplechaser Billy Barton.

A Controversy Boils

It's hard to argue against the comments of Dr. Robert A. Leonard and Charles McGinnes on page 23 of this magazine — even though they express diametrically opposite points of view.

Both men are sincere in stating their opinions on the future of the Eastern Fall Yearling Sales. Leonard believes that the 1975 edition was poorly planned; McGinnes feels that this year's format should be continued.

Said Dr. Leonard: "Anyone who sells a yearling for less than $10,000 is taking a loss whether he realizes it or not. This is a business and we've got to learn to handle our sales to take care of people who pay attention to their business."

What Dr. Leonard objects to was inclusion in the Eastern Fall catalogue of sub-standard yearlings. Those yearlings were segregated from the "select" EFS horses in both the catalogue and in selling sessions.

Nevertheless, Dr. Leonard believes that their acceptance (all were sold on Monday night in the third session) weakened the auction and depressed the average. He believes that the EFS was designed as a select auction and should so remain.

On the other side of the fence, Mr. McGinnes is quoted as saying: "A high average is naturally desirable. But is it the single most over-riding objective? Isn't the real purpose of the sale to provide a good marketplace for as many breeders as possible? I think the high average is subordinate to the main goal — that of helping the breeder sell his yearlings."

Windfields Farm's Joe Hickey is quoted as siding with Dr. Leonard. Frank Hopkins and Bill Hebb align themselves with McGinnes.

As for me, I'm inclined to go along with McGinnes, Hopkins and Hebb.

It seems a shame to me to limit the EFS to only two selling sessions when the consignors have more horses to offer and the buyers are already assembled at Timonium.

Maybe both sides could be made happy by the creation of a separate catalogue for Monday night's horses. And the name of Monday night's sale could be changed, too. That way the Eastern Fall Sale would retain its identity and it's relatively high average while those yearlings turned down for the EFS could continue to be offered but under a different banner.
